

GERMANS RETREAT FROM WARSAW

French Motor Units Take Suburbs of Saarbruecken

Key to Advance Posts On Siegfried Line in Saar Sector Captured

Motorized Units Reach Strategic Position Between Moselle and Rhine Rivers on Western Front; German Forces Left in Danger of Attack from both Front and Flank; Planes Aid French

Paris, Sept. 12 (AP)—French motorized units were reported tonight driving into the suburbs of the German industrial city of Saarbruecken.

The city of the German Saar is regarded as the key to the advance positions of Germany's Siegfried line on the 100-mile northern flank, between the Moselle and Rhine rivers, of the Western front.

The French drive on Saarbruecken put a wedge into the advance fortifications of the main German Siegfried line at their strongest point east of this capital of the rich Saar mining basin.

Pound German Lines

French artillery pounded German lines surrounding the city from heights in the forest of Warndt, region to the southwest captured by the French last week, and the French were reported to have "slightly turned" the defenses of Saarbruecken during the day.

Behind the lines, French Premier Edouard Daladier met British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain for a secret meeting of the French-British supreme war council.

This first meeting of the supreme war council, whose four members from the high command of the French and British allied forces, not only was concerned with the immediate political and military situation but with the next moves of their general strategy.

The French drive was concentrated on Saarbruecken for two apparent reasons:

1. Capture of the city and bridgehead across the Saar river would force a wide breach in the advance system of blockhouses and machine-gun nests covering the Nazi west wall through which the French would drive toward their main objective—the Siegfried line.

As a result of the collapse of this center key all the German positions in the no man's land between the Siegfried and Maginot lines would have to be abandoned or risk being crushed by simultaneous attack from the front and flank.

2. The city's fall would give the French possession of the rich Saar mining basin, for its size is one of the most productive coal areas in the world.

Tanks Swept Ahead

French motorized units of fleet tanks and armored cars swept toward Saarbruecken over rough country on either side of the little Moselle river after the whole area had been drenched by heavy French field batteries from the Warndt forest.

From the main Siegfried line positions some seven miles behind Saarbruecken the heavy fortress artillery for which the Germans are famous laid down a heavy barrage to cut the advancing French troops. On this sector of the front the Maginot line itself was unaffected by the battle as the French advance guard positions have been pushed some miles in front of the permanent fortifications from which the poliois jumped off.

The French tactics in the drive against Saarbruecken were typical of those they have used up to date. First, French scouting and fighting planes roared out over the German positions fighting the air clear. Armored units followed rolling down on the German concrete pillboxes and crashing through barbed wire entanglements.

Behind these came fighting engineers who mopped up German "side squads" which the tanks and squad cars had left behind. These French lines tonight were in the form of a pincers slowly closing in on Saarbruecken.

New York, Sept. 12 (AP)—All ships ship approached American shores. Officials said an unidentified submarine was reported operating off Nantucket lightship yesterday.

Reporting graphic indications of the Atlantic dangers, the British liner Arandora Star slipped into port with 260 relieved Americans among her 441 passengers. Nine submarine warnings were issued during the crossing. The final warning came as the

War Brings More Business to U. S. Survey Discloses

Military and Private Industry Profits in Many Sections

New York, Sept. 12 (AP)—War in Europe is bringing a pronounced upturn throughout the United States in military and private industries, especially those which may be converted to war-time purposes, a survey showed today.

The $200,000,000-a-year aviation manufacturing industry was reported authoritatively to be heading for absolute maximum production soon.

The government's six arsenals, although still on an 8-hour day, employ 14,000 men — 4,000 more than last year.

Report More Employment

Steel, chemicals, railroads and a dozen other industries which have sealed government orders for opening in emergency reported increased employment and activity.

Financial authorities attribute a considerable part of this upturn to replenishment of inventories to expectation of the usual higher wartime prices, and to the expectation that the importation of important commodities such as textiles may be reduced.

The Glenn Martin Airplane Company in Baltimore has taken on 4,000 employees in the last three months. The Bethlehem Steel plant at Sparrows Point, Md., which has been making steel and high-speed tank ships, has increased the working hours of 20,000 employees.

Expect More Business

The Monsanto Chemical Company in St. Louis, one of the largest, while not expecting increased production for munitions unless "the requirements of the U. S. government demand," is anticipating increased domestic and foreign business because of the shutting off of European chemical sources.

Heavy-industry plants around Milwaukee report increases in orders for such military goods as navy cranes, gun mounts, and carriages, motors, machine tools and lighting equipment; one plant has been asked to bid for the manufacture of tanks.

Five iron mines in the Michigan Ishpeming-Negaunee district, which have been on two or three-day weeks for nearly a year, yesterday went on a five-day week.

Looking forward to wartime freight increases, the Louisville and Nashville railroad yesterday boosted

Roosevelt Serves Notice U. S. Will Resist Seizures

Indirectly Informs Germany We Will Enforce Monroe Doctrine

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Sept. 12 (AP)—Indirectly but definitely, President Roosevelt served notice today that Germany would not be permitted to seize any British or French territory on this side of the Atlantic.

Restating the Monroe Doctrine, Mr. Roosevelt made it plain to a press conference that the United States for its own protection would be bound to resist such a move.

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt said he would have an announcement "soon" on the calling of a special session of Congress to revise the neutrality act. Although Chairman Sabath (D-Ill.) of the House Rules Committee left the presidential office a few hours earlier predicting the session would convene about Oct. 1, Mr. Roosevelt did not set a date. He merely said that Sabath's guess was as good as any.

The discussion of the Monroe Doctrine arose when a correspondent began questioning the president about his speech made at Kingston, Ont., last year saying that "The People of the United States will not stand idly by if domination of Canadian soil is threatened by any other empire (than the British empire)."

The position of the United States toward Canada, in the light of the Monroe Doctrine and of that statement by the president, has been the subject of much speculation since Canada joined the rest of the British Empire in declaring war on Germany.

But even more intensively some conversations have dealt with what the United States would do should a victorious Germany seize British possessions in the West Indies.

Compensation Is Refused Miners

Richmond, Va., Sept. 12 (AP)—In a decision involving "something over 12,000 claims," the Virginia unemployment compensation commission denied today applications for jobless benefits of most southwest Virginia miners affected by the mine shutdown from April 1 through May 17.

The decision affirmed the commission's original determination that the period of unemployment during negotiations between the United Mine Workers and mine operators on a new contract "resulted from a stoppage of work caused by a labor dispute," automatically disqualifying the miners from unemployment compensation.

Exception Announced
However, an exception was made as to the claims of employees of the Carter Coal Company and the Conaway Coal Corporation, the number of whose employees was not given.

In the case of the Conaway Coal Corporation, the commission held that from April 1 to April 28 the stoppage of work was caused by a labor dispute but that from April 28, the stoppage of work at that operation existed from other causes which did not disqualify workers for unemployment benefits.

No Details Given
He did not go into details on the Carter Coal Company cases but the decision indicated the period of idleness there was not attributed to a "labor dispute."

Germany Confiscates Every Tire in Reich

Stringent Economy Measure Practically Bars Use of Motor Cars

Chicago, Sept. 12 (AP)—J. M. Symes, general manager of the Pennsylvania railroad, said tonight America's railroads are ready for any emergency and "can adequately handle any upturn in business occasioned by the present European situation."

"A 20 percent increase in railroad traffic could be taken care of immediately," he said in a prepared address at the 50th annual banquet of the American Association of Railway Surgeons. "In addition to the freight cars now in service there are more than 200,000 freight cars in this country awaiting repairs. The railroads are already increasing their repair programs to meet the situation."

Hence the present plan is to fight until all Poland is occupied and the Polish military so scattered that it would be impossible for it to reassemble and make trouble.

Nothing was said about the amount of territory desired nor about the necessity of disabling the whole Polish army.

Duke and Duchess Return to London

London, Sept. 12 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor and his American-born duchess, the former Wallis Warfield of Baltimore, have come "home" after nearly three years on alien soil.

Expectant Britons learned from the terse announcement by the British minister of information tonight that their former king and the woman for whom he renounced his imperial throne Dec. 10, 1936, are now in England.

Outcome of War May Hinge Upon Action by Italy

Conversations Now in Progress May Determine Future of Europe

Rome, Sept. 12 (AP)—Diplomatic circles expressed belief tonight that the outcome of the European war and the future of Europe hinged on diplomatic conversations now under way between Great Britain and Italy.

The deepest secrecy shrouds the repeated conferences between Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano and the British ambassador, Sir Percy Loraine.

The British-Italian conversations followed talks between the French Ambassador, Andre Francois-Poncet, and Count Ciano, after which the French envoy returned to Paris to report.

Meanwhile, a Japanese military mission which has been visiting Italian arms factories at Turin since the signature of the German-Soviet Russian non-aggression pact caused it to cancel a trip to Germany, now is said to be considering a trip to London.

No diplomat of any other country pretends to have precise information.

Mention of Brain Trust Prompts Roosevelt To Tell a Ghost Story

Washington, Sept. 12 (AP)—Mention of the brain trust at a press conference today set President off on a ghost story.

The brain trust, he said, was a two-headed Corcoran-Cohen ban-shiee (ghost to you) which had been created by the press and finally laid to rest by the press.

He said with a grin that the ghost had been killed by reporters at Hyde Park Sunday in writing about an executive order reorganizing the White House staff. This remark apparently referred to news dispatches quoting a statement by the president's secretary, Stephen Early.

In commenting on the White House staff reorganization, Early said on Saturday:

"It is out of the window for the much-heralded and celebrated features of the imagination. We

Hitler Plans To Fight Way Across Poland to Russia

Fuehrer Hopes To Render Entire Polish Army Harmless

By MELVIN WHITELEATHER

Berlin, Sept. 12 (AP)—German authoritative sources said tonight, intends to fight across Poland all the way to the Russian border, if this should be necessary, to render the entire Polish army harmless.

Entrance of France and Britain into the war has changed the picture. It was said, so that the high command wants to eliminate completely the possibility of having to fight for long on two fronts at the same time.

Hence the present plan is to fight until all Poland is occupied and the Polish military so scattered that it would be impossible for it to reassemble and make trouble.

100,000 Men Diverted From Siege of Capital, Polish Announcer Says

Berlin Statement Declares Polish Resistance in Radom Sector along Vistula Has Been Blasted and That Nazis Are Advancing Rapidly upon Lwow; Predict Fall of Warsaw

By The Associated Press

The Polish defenders of Warsaw announced over their official radio this (Wednesday) morning that the German attackers had been definitely turned back.

Nine German divisions, or approximately 100,000 men, have been diverted from the five-day-old siege of the capital and rushed to other fronts, the announcer said.

A Berlin official statement said Polish resistance in the Radom section along the Vistula was blasted, that German troops were advancing rapidly on Lwow (Lemberg) far south of Warsaw and that capture of the Polish city of Sambor brought German soldiers to the Dniester river. Przemysl on the San river also was reported captured.

The Warsaw radio said the city still was being shelled but was quieter than yesterday.

IRON RING AROUND CAPITAL

The German armies in Poland announced they were forcing an iron ring around Poland's city of Warsaw yesterday (Tuesday) by closing a rail line to the northeast and reaching another one to the east.

The Poles declared the defenders had driven the Germans "far into the outskirts."

Both sides claimed gains, but in general the opposing armies appeared to be locked in fierce combat at three main points, with the Poles stubbornly resisting the swift, highly mechanized invaders.

The battle scenes were Warsaw, a point south-east of Warsaw on the Vistula front, and a point about 60 miles west of Warsaw, near Lodz.

The Germans announced they had captured Poznan, Torun, Gniezno, Hohensalza "and other cities" in western Poland.

As the Poles fought through their third day of sudden resistance, British Prime Minister Chamberlain and French Premier Daladier met "somewhere in France" in a surprise secret meeting to "consecrate all their forces and all their resources" to aid Poland.

GERMAN ARTILLERY ACTIVE

On the western front the French reported their vanguard drove a wedge into advance fortifications of the Nazi Siegfried line east of Saarbruecken, and that their continued progress was provoking strong reaction from German artillery.

Artillery pounded the German lines from heights in the newly-won Warndt forest region.

Britain announced the 9,456-ton British tanker Inverliffey had been sunk by a German submarine and the crew rescued by the American steamer R. G. Stewart.

Fourteen men were killed when the Finnish bark Olivebank was blown up off southwestern Denmark. Seven survivors said their ship had struck a mine.

CHAMBERLAIN REPORTS TODAY

Prime Minister Chamberlain will give Parliament his second report on the war today. He gave King George a report of his Tuesday's trip to France.

Britain prepared to transfer between 7,000 and 8,000 government employees from London to secret points in the country to get part of the governmental machinery out of the capital.

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor returned to England for the first time since the Duke abdicated as King Edward VIII to marry the Duchess.

Informed sources in Berlin said of submarine warfare that Germany would match "an eye for an eye" in fighting the British sea blockade.

Germany concentrated on conquering Warsaw quickly for its effect on the morale of the German population at home.

Warsaw Radio Announcer Reports Germans Definitely "on the Run"

Budapest, Sept. 13 (Wednesday) (AP)—An official Warsaw radio broadcast said early today nine German divisions had been diverted from the four-day Warsaw siege to the western European and Vistula fronts and that the Nazi invaders now are definitely "on the run."

Martial music blared from the Warsaw station last night to tell Europe the dodged defenders of Poland's capital clung to their heavily shelled positions. Yesterday's losses were said to be

Chamberlain and French Leaders Meet in France

Britain's Premier Makes Flying Trip Across the Channel

BY FRED VANDERSCHMIDT
London, Sept. 12 (AP)—Britain's flying prime minister in a short and sudden visit "somewhere in France" conferred today with British and French leaders in a meeting of the supreme war council on allied plans against Germany.

The ministry of information announced on his return tonight: "The meeting has fully confirmed the firm resolve of Great Britain and France to devote their entire strength and resources to the waging of the conflict which has been forced upon them and to give all possible assistance to their Polish ally who is resisting with so much gallantry the ruthless invasion of her territory."

In a half-hour audience with King George, Chamberlain gave an account of his surprise trip to France.

It was believed the prime minister would mention his important discussions with France when he gives his second "war bulletin" to the House of Commons tomorrow afternoon.

Chamberlain gave his first review of the war situation to the House last Thursday and such statements are expected periodically.

Other developments in the tenth day of the British-French war with Germany included:

Other Developments
1. Britain, taking action to send part of her governmental machinery from London, announced she was taking steps to transfer between 7,000 and 8,000 government employees to secret points in the country.
2. The Duke of Windsor, the former King Edward VIII, returned to his native land for the first time with the woman he gave up the throne to marry, the former Wallis Warfield of Baltimore.
3. The 9,456-ton British tanker Inverliffy sank in the Atlantic, presumably after a submarine attack, and her crew was rescued by an American tanker.

The ministry of information in announcing Prime Minister Chamberlain's flight to France said he was accompanied by Lord Chatfield, minister for coordination of defense, and that the supreme war council's meeting also was attended by France's premier, Edouard Daladier, and General Maurice Gustave Gamelin, commander-in-chief of the British and French armies in the west.

In announcing that steps were being taken to transfer part of the British governmental machinery from London, a spokesman emphasized "there is no question of the government as a whole being evacuated."

He added that "not a single minister" nor anyone concerned in the wartime activities of the government was leaving the capital.

Last June a London dispatch reported, the British government was working on an emergency plan to shift the bulk of its administrative machinery to safety zones in the country.

The plan, it was said at the time, would send 200,000 employees to temporary department headquarters and only key officials would remain in London, working and sleeping in bombproof office basements.

The announcement followed by some hours final censorship authorization for publication in Great Britain for the first time of news of the arrival of British troops, planes and equipment in France.

(French dispatches last week initially reported that British troops had landed on French soil.)

Subway Stations Closed
The government also announced that some of the many London subway stations now closed to the public would have to remain closed indefinitely.

The closings were ordered to permit precautions to eliminate the risk of flooding by bursting water mains or sewers during an air attack.

Some Britons interpreted the arrival of their troops in France as setting the stage for the first major allied offensive of the war.

The French-British ideal was described by military observers as a break through the enemy lines which would send divisions pouring into German territory to cut communications and paralyze war industries.

The authorization for publication of news of the arrival of British troops across the channel came after a night of confusion.

The government first allowed the news to be published, then rescinded the permission and finally early this morning reinstated the original decision.

Florida Thanksgiving Day Set for Nov. 30

Tallahassee, Fla., Sept. 12 (AP)—Governor Fred P. Cone, who previously said he was undecided as to when to fix the state's Thanksgiving date, today chose Nov. 30.

President Roosevelt recently suggested moving the holiday up a week.

insignificant for the first time since the siege began—only 16 army casualties being listed.

Only three air raids were reported in the city.

Polish staff Captain Vaclav Lipinski in an announcement said the German onslaughts with tanks and motorized corps had failed and air raids no longer were a danger to the morale of the people.

Thousands who fled the city were said to be returning and volunteering for defense duty.

The announcement did not estimate the number of German troops withdrawn from the siege but a division normally runs between 10,000 and 12,000 men.

Great Artillery Duel under Way in the Eastern Moselle Valley

By CHARLES FOLTZ, JR.

Basel, Switzerland, Sept. 13 (Wednesday) (AP)—Reports reaching Switzerland early today indicated one of the greatest artillery duels in history began during the night in the eastern Moselle valley between Germany's Siegfried and France's Maginot lines.

Shells shrieked high over the border hills.

The Moselle valley has been converted into one of the heaviest fortified regions in the world, with the great Siegfried forts on the French side and the strong Trassens area on the other line.

Swiss observers expressed the opinion the British and French staffs were building up an actual assault on the Siegfried line itself in the near future.

The German town of Hornbach, less than two miles from the tip of the Bitcher frontier salient of the western front was described in dispatches reaching Switzerland last night as a no-man's-land which for two days has been pounded by both Maginot and Siegfried line guns.

The population had moved out, as well as from the Bavarian towns of Zwiibrücken, whose two bridges carry the vital rail supply line behind the Siegfried line, and Pirmasens, manufacturing town behind the eastern section of the line.

Despite concentrated gunfire and stabbing counter attacks of German shock troops which apparently halted the French drive between the Saar river and the Voges mountains, the French were reported still in possession of the greater part of their yesterday's gains on both sides of the Bitcher frontier salient.

More than a week of calm reportedly relaxed tension along the southern French-German border. Frenchmen whose comrades were engaging in bitter battles just around the frontier bend on the western front swam in the Rhine in plain view of the opposite forts.

German trains, headed for Italy with thousands of tons of coal, rolled south clearly visible to the French artillerymen sitting behind the powerful Maginot forts across the river.

Friday a station at Mutzen near Basel checked through 2,100 tons of coal. Southbound German traffic Saturday was 3,450 tons, all bound over St. Gotthard pass for Italy to be exchanged for food supplies.

mation on what is being discussed among the French and British allies and Italy but most of the diplomatic corps believe a move of the greatest importance is afoot.

Shrewd analysts now generally scout the idea of peace after Germany conquers Poland—if she does. They believe Britain and France will not give in, for it would be a defeat by default. Likewise, they believe Mussolini realizes Great Britain and France are determined to fight the German foe, Adolf Hitler, for years if necessary.

The analysts expressed the belief that Mussolini is in a key position—his entrance into the war on either side might decide it.

Should he join Germany and should the combination win, they said, he would have the choice of picking British and French properties around the Mediterranean and in Africa.

Mussolini's Position
But he would be faced with a terrible alternative from France, the possible closing of the Suez canal and the immediate loss of Ethiopia, and attacks on Libya from both Tunisia and Egypt.

If Mussolini joins Britain and France, the diplomatic quarters hold, the position would be reversed.

With 250 miles of frontier with Germany protected by Alpine peaks, Mussolini would have little to fear from a Reich occupied on two other fronts.

On the other hand, he could provide Britain and France with a new frontier to harass Germany and could cut off Germany's supplies from the south.

It was widely believed in the diplomatic corps that Italy's entrance into the war on the side of Great Britain and France would galvanize the recently-formed neutral bloc in southeastern Europe into action against Germany.

The chief obstacle, in the opinion of these diplomats, is that at present Great Britain and France have offered no price approaching the spoils Italy would reap on Germany's side.

Germans Pound Polish Defenses On Three Fronts

German High Command Threatens To Choke Off Supplies

By EDWIN SHANKE

Berlin, Sept. 12 (AP)—Pounding at the Polish defenses of Warsaw on three fronts, the German army drew tighter tonight an iron ring which, its high command declared, was threatening to choke off the besieged capital.

From the west, the northeast and the southeast, the armies of the Reich hit at the Poles simultaneously. The vanguard of the northeastern force was reported to have crossed a railway due east of Warsaw. The Germans said a Polish force of four divisions was beginning to surrender in an area south-east of Warsaw. (A division normally is between 10,000 and 12,000 men.)

The third active spot was a triangular area south of the Vistula and above Lodz, to the west of Warsaw, where between 50,000 and 60,000 Poles were said to be endeavoring to break a German circle.

Hitler at the Front
Both the German fuhrer, Adolf Hitler, and his ranking lieutenant, Field Marshal Goering, were on the Polish front.

Throughout Germany, the populace eagerly followed the accounts of the struggle for Warsaw. Other news paled into insignificance.

Word spread through Berlin that Hitler's partner in the Rome-Berlin axis, Premier Mussolini, was ready to make new peace efforts now with virtually all Polish territory which was in Germany before 1914 re-taken by the eastern arm.

German sources said the Reich troops have pushed far beyond those 1914 limits in their drive to subdue Poland. But Wilhelmstrasse spokesmen said they knew nothing officially of the Mussolini peace proposal.

The German high command said the cities of Poznan, Torun (Thorn), Hohenhausen, Gniezno and numerous others had been captured in the provinces of Poznan and West Prussia.

This advance was reported to have swept the Poles out of the north on a front running roughly from Gniezno to the north of Wloclawek, Plock and Modlin, fortress cities guarding the approach to Warsaw from the northwest.

Fighting Near Lodz
Heavy fighting was reported by the Germans from the triangle formed by Kutno, Piatek, and Leczyca, above Lodz and almost directly west of Warsaw. German officials said the Polish army had suffered heavy losses and they expressed confidence the enemy would capitulate soon.

A German victory here would open the way for a mass advance on Warsaw from the west, reinforcing motorized troops which reached Warsaw last Friday but which since withdrew to await the main German column. The advance force was said to have met heavy Polish artillery fire from the eastern side of the city.

Northwest of Warsaw, the Germans were reported to have fought their way across the Narew and Bug rivers. They were said officially to have crossed the main railway line leading from Warsaw northeast to Bialystok and their advance guards were declared to have reached the railway between Warsaw and Siedlce, 50 miles east of Warsaw.

Claim Poles Surrendering
In the heavily-fought sector east of Radom and the Vistula and south of Warsaw, meantime, the retreat of four divisions was reported out off by the Germans. The Poles were said to be beginning to lay down their arms.

Retreat was made especially difficult in that area, the army declared, because Goering's air force laid down a sheet of bombs on roads and bridges.

While reports of intense activity flooded in from the eastern front, German sources remained strangely quiet about developments on the French border, although they said civilians were being sent away from the western fortification zone.

Under cover of their artillery barrage, French forces moved up both sides of the Moselle river, which enters Germany at a westward jog in the frontier. The advance was to clean out approaches to Saarbrücken.

Because of its importance industrially and as a bridgehead, the Germans have constructed at Saarbrücken what are believed to be the strongest advance positions of the Siegfried line.

Activity in this sector and seven miles to the southeast in the Bitcher plateau overshadowed German counter-attacks along the Moselle valley farther north.

The German action appeared to be designed for two purposes—first, to divert French attention from Saarbrücken, and second, to strengthen the German flank along the Luxembourg frontier where the French attack had weakened it.

The Saar battle is developing slowly into what apparently is the first major operation of the western front although the French, who have carried the attack to German territory, have not made contact with Germany's main "west wall."

There seemed no doubt, however, that the operations hourly were assuming more serious proportions.

Report Lodz Captured
London, Sept. 13 (Wednesday) (AP)—A Reuters (British) news agency dispatch today quoted a "reliable source" as saying Lodz had been recaptured by the Poles from the Germans.

Describes Plight Of Polish Army

Rome, Sept. 12 (AP)—The bitter plight of Polish troops north of Lodz was described today in a dispatch from Il Giornale d'Italia's correspondent on the Eastern front.

Caught between three fronts those Poles have been hammered incessantly from the air, the correspondent reported, and have been meeting motorized German troops under most unfavorable conditions.

The correspondent wrote that one column of field artillery was caught by German airmen, "evidently by surprise." Men, cannons and wagons remained in a tangled mass from an air attack carried out with "frightful destructive power."

All Italian dispatches speak prominently of the action of sharpshooters who rove in bands at night. One dispatch from Berlin said they killed "several thousands" Germans in one night.

would wear down the thickly-massed Polish forces.

Snipers Are Problem
Snipers have been one of the German army's greatest problems, all the way from the German frontier to Warsaw. The snipers have paid dearly, but the practice still is kept up.

They are to the Germans one of the most annoying factors in the present effort to capture Warsaw. The Polish capital's "civilian force"—snipers—shooting from buildings has disturbed the advance guard of Germans trying to gain a foothold in the city.

A wounded courier arriving at the German border tonight told a story of two comrades being shot in Warsaw's streets.

The Germans have left the countryside relatively thinly occupied with troops. Soldiers have been kept moving close to the fast-advancing fronts.

"Thousands of 'auxiliary troops' have been rushed into the conquered territory nearest the German border to assist in rebuilding bridges and filling the ruts on dirt roads."

Boys Put to Work
They commandeered thousands of wagons and teams. Among them are 18-year old youths of the labor service. These auxiliary troops form the only visible signs of occupation in some areas.

Germany's army moved along as though on concrete highways like those in Germany. I saw but two German armored cars out of commission, evidently rendered so by hand grenades.

I passed two Polish cars battered to pieces. Alongside each was a mound of fresh dirt with a cross and a helmet hung over the cross.

Motors carried the entire German army into the campaign. Railways were useless as the Poles dynamited all bridges and railway switches when retreating. I saw only one rail line in operation and that was just inside Poland in Silesia.

The German army, which was organized to the minutest detail, apparently clicked without a hitch.

Submarine Off Nantucket Causes Scare in New York Shipping Area

strued to have any relation to the Roma, the naval district headquarters announced shortly after she sailed that the British admiralty had prohibited vessels from anchoring at Malta, British Mediterranean base about 60 miles south of Italian Sicily.

Meanwhile, the German Hamburg-American and North German Lloyd lines ordered wholesale dismissals of their employees here, effective Sept. 30, because of the tie-up of their ships.

British Line Suspends
The British Furness Bermuda line cancelled all operations to the British possession, effective at the end of this week.

In Washington state department officials studied reports that a German submarine commander had served notice that all American ships not heeding commands to halt would be fired upon.

The Arandora Star, leaving Southampton three days before war was declared, followed a zig-zag course far off her normal lane. She carried $17,500,000 in gold.

Following her was the Cunard White Star liner Aquitania, second largest of the line's Transatlantic fleet. She was reported "somewhere at sea" bound for New York with 1,633 passengers.

Quints Doctor Gives Advice About Babies

Cleveland, Sept. 11 — The lives of thousands of babies could be saved by using the same simple methods that kept the Dionne quintuplets alive. Dr. Allan Roy Dafeo declared today.

He reminded the American Congress of Obstetrics and Gynecology that babies born prematurely, as the quintuplets were, should be put immediately under blankets or kept warm in any crude incubator, fed only with breast milk, protected from infection, and handled as little as possible.

The quintuplets are well into their sixth year as normal girls. Their care after the first year of life "has been no different from that ordinarily supplies to any well-cared for infant." Only during the first year of life, and particularly the first few weeks do premature or "fragile babies" require special care.

U. S. TROOPS ON MOVE, TOO

With Europe at war, America is strengthening its defenses at all key points. American anti-aircraft soldiers from Fort Winfield Scott are pictured just before they sailed from Fort Mason, Calif., for Puerto Rico, America's Gibraltar, where they will strengthen garrison guarding the Panama Canal.

American Military Experts See Poles in a Dangerous Position

Believe Army Cannot Escape Germans Attacking Warsaw

By E. E. BOMAR

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Beset on several flanks by more numerous, better-armed German troops, Poland's hard-pressed armies were in the desperate position last night of having to fight or face a debacle.

Retreat from Warsaw and the Vistula river defense lines, even if contemplated, appeared now to neutral military men to be impossible.

Tracing on maps the course of the battle of Warsaw and comparing conflicting reports, some were almost ready to count Poland out as a military obstacle to Germany on the Eastern front.

Another "miracle of the Marne" was needed to save Poland, and all odds appeared against a definite turn of the tide such as saved Paris a quarter of a century ago from the threats like that facing Warsaw—and more importantly, the main Polish armies.

New Weapons in Use
Such weapons as fast moving tanks and aerial bombers, which Germany has been employing in overwhelming force, did not exist as military factors in 1914.

The drama in the east continued to overshadow the few significant developments on the Western front, including the announcement in London that British troops have joined the French. Information here was that possibly two British divisions had been in France for some time.

To informed observers the immediate course of events in Poland hinged on the unanswered question of how many troops and what guns and other war materials the Poles will be able to extract from the giant Nazi trap threatening them in Western Poland.

In an effort to crush Poland quickly Germany has hurled some 85 divisions into the eastern front campaign, by the most authoritative information, or some 15 more than Field Marshal Goering mentioned in predicting Poland's collapse within four weeks.

Poles Face Heavy Odds
Opposing them are probably half as many first line Polish divisions of from 10,000 to 15,000 men each. Berlin's claims that 18 to 20 Polish divisions were threatened with destruction or capture west of the Vistula seemed entirely credible, in the light of these odds.

Unless a substantial proportion of these forces can withdraw across the Vistula the issue might well be settled.

It is axiomatic with military strategists, nevertheless, that 3 to 1 preponderance in strength is required to assure success against a prepared defensive position. Further, reports that the delayed autumn rains have started offered some additional hope to the defenders.

Fight in 1914 Sector
The Eastern front fighting is on a historic battleground. It was around Lodz in November, 1914, that a German army faced by a Russian force thrice its size and seemingly in as desperate a position as the present Poles, won a brilliant victory.

The following year the German General von Mackensen defeated the Russians, defending the same Vistula line that is Poland's stronghold in the new European war.

Revising von Mackensen's strategy, the Nazis have undertaken—apparently with marked success—to outflank the defense line from the north.

More than 100 miles south of Warsaw another German flanking column appears to be pushing toward Lwow—the World War Lemberg—with the aim of closing the Rumanian border and setting up a frontier with Soviet Russia.

Sweden, Curbs Radio

New York, Sept. 12 (AP)—Stringent new Swedish broadcasting regulations, under which foreign ships are prohibited from sending anything but distress signals, were received today by MacKay Radio.

At the same time Sweden suspended radio telephone communications with ships by way of coastal stations.

ish and French holdings near the Panama canal.

The Monroe doctrine was enunciated, Mr. Roosevelt said, at a time when portions of Central and South America had won their independence from European sovereignties and had set up republics. At that time there was talk in Europe of forming a coalition of powers to restore European sovereignty over Central and South America, Mr. Roosevelt added.

Explains Monroe Doctrine
Much was written on the subject of the doctrine at the time, said the president, adding that a reading of this literature would disclose that the Monroe Doctrine, as accepted by the country at that time, included a definite thought that no European power should reestablish its sovereignty over any section which had gained its freedom. It applied, too, he added, to changes in the sovereignty of sections which had not revolted.

Time, he said, brought a general acceptance of the sovereignty of these nations because the United States never had any trouble over them, and they never bothered any American nations, with the exception of a boundary dispute settled through the intervention of the United States. But a change in the sovereignty of these sections now might present a different situation, he said.

Thus, Mr. Roosevelt concluded, his statement at Kingston presented not a new statement of the Monroe Doctrine but a restatement of that instrument. And it applies, he added, not only to Canada but to all of the Americas, including British and Dutch Guiana, British Honduras, Guadalupe, Martinique and other possessions of European powers in this hemisphere.

Watching Commodity Prices
The press conference swung to a different subject, and the president said he was watching commodity prices, mentioning copper particularly. That metal, he said, could be profitably produced at 12½ cents per pound, but in the World War rose to 28 cents. It was desirable, he said, that a recurrence be avoided. Steel he put in much the same category, but noted that as yet there had been no advance in prices.

He said agricultural commodities presented differing problems at the production and at the retailing end. The cotton price was so low the South would go broke but for soil erosion payments and export subsidies, he continued, expressing a hope that the quotation would go up. As to wheat, he said the price was well below parity, but that parity was not four or five dollars a bushel. He quoted the department of agriculture as saying that the parity price for wheat would be $1.15 to $1.20 per bushel. An increase in the price to that level, he added, would entail only an inappreciable rise in the cost of bread.

Battle Over Neutrality
While the president was considering a date for the special session, opponents of his neutrality policy were preparing for a hard-fought struggle to prevent the repeal of the present embargo on arms shipments to belligerent nations. Senator Nye (R-Nd) said today that if that were attempted, the president would "run into a real legislative war."

He accused administration leaders of planning to impose a "rag rule," asserting that nevertheless there would be "extended and thorough debate," with the special session running into January. However, he minimized the possibility of a filibuster.

Lift Squalus Today
Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 12 (AP)—All was ready tonight for a start at daylight tomorrow to lift the Squalus to the surface of the Atlantic and tow her nine miles into the Navy yard.

Tomcraw salvagers intend to pump air into the submersible which, with two pontoons attached to the bow and two to the stern, is expected to bring the Squalus and its 26 dead to the surface.

Shipping Losses Growing Greater On the High Seas

Total of 131,259 Tons Lost Since Beginning of the War

By The Associated Press
Shipping losses mounted to at least 131,259 yesterday (Tuesday) as Germany announced an "eye-for-an-eye" campaign in the merciless struggle for mastery of the seas.

The tonnage did not include German and excluded also an unidentified German destroyer which was down with an undetermined loss of life. At least 181 are known to have perished in the other sinkings.

Twenty-seven ships are known to have plunged to the bottom—victims of submarines, mines and naval shelling. Three German merchantmen have run aground on the rocky Norwegian coast after changing their routes to avoid British men-o-war.

With Britain claiming she had established a blockade and run Nazi ships off the surface of the sea, the German government announced in Berlin that it would let England set the blockade pace but the Reich would match it "eye for eye, tooth for tooth."

Asked whether a neutral ship found carrying contraband would be allowed to return to its home port, a German official in Berlin said:

"Certainly not, then it would simply look around for some other way of reaching England. So there is nothing left for us to do in such a case but to sink it."

British losses to date total 16 merchantmen—all sunk by U-boats. Known German losses total nine. Three mined, three chased around and three sunk by English warships.

The French have lost one, and neutral nations four—all victims of mines.

Besides these, it is possible other ships have been sent to the bottom without warning or exploded on striking mines before an SOS could be dispatched.

Yesterday's losses included the new British oil tanker Inverliffy, built for a London company by the Nazis at Hamburg last year, and the picturesque old Finnish bark Olvbank which struck a mine about 106 miles southwest of Esbjerg, Denmark.

The Olivebank, a 2,795-ton vessel in the England-Finland trade, exploded with a great roar, killing 16 men. Seven were saved.

The Inverliffy was attacked by a submarine near Havre. Her crew of approximately 40 was rescued by the Standard Oil Tanker R. G. Stewart and transferred later to the City of Joliet, American freighter bound for Antwerp from New Orleans.

The Right Kind of Swing Will Nip in That Waistline

By BETTY CLARKE

AP Feature Service Writer

Most women who go in for the new "hourglass" silhouette, that makes the hips "spring out" and cinches in the waist, will have to wear corsets. That's going to make a lot of women pretty uncomfortable, especially if they have been holding the hips in a minimum and have shoved excess fat into the "spare tire" area.

Contour experts, in fact, long have recognized the need of exercise to overcome that spare tire waistline. And they have devised exercises meant to pull the ribs away from the hips — and make way for the slender waistline most young women normally have.

Here are some of those exercises: FIRST, there's that old-timer, the "airplane." Stand as tall as possible, stretch your arms sideways, at shoulder height, palms down. Now, bend over and touch your right toes with your left hand, then touch your left toes with your right hand. The secret of this exercise is in the stretch. You must stretch from the waistline. If you just bend casually, leaving your hands to dangle, you might just as well skip this exercise.

SECOND: Lie on your back, arms stretched above you, your whole body tight to the floor. Now swing both your arms and your legs to the right — so your body looks like a half-moon. Repeat, swinging arms and legs to the left so the left part of your body gets a good stretching, too.

THIRD: Stand with your feet apart, clasp your hands together over your head. Now swing your arms in a circle around your head. Bend as far as you can in every direction. After you've done this ten times or so reverse and swing your arms in the other direction.

Waist-Slenderizer: Gloria Brewster, movie actress, does the well-known "airplane" exercise that helps you make way for a slender waistline

Parking Space Costs a Lot

Roanoke, Va. (AP)—Parking space on the city streets at $3.52 a car, said City Manager W. P. Hunter, is "too expensive."

The comment came when four cars parked on the widened portion of a street before the mayor was dry. The project had just cost the city $15,300.

When he found the four cars occupying such expensive space, Hunter sent out a hurry call for "No Parking" signs.

Doctors Receive War Orders

Berlin (AP)—Doctors were advised to wash their hands several minutes longer in order to economize on valuable rubber gloves as a war measure. Germany is trying to preserve rubber for national purposes.

Cheltenham School Reports at Variance

Baltimore, Sept. 12 (AP)—Conditions at the Cheltenham school for negro boys were praised in one report filed by a majority of the Baltimore grand jury while a minority report declared "cows and hogs get much better attention than the boys themselves."

The majority report was filed with Judge Emory H. Niles by Louis G. Groener and Henry C. Miller. It described the much publicized Prince Georges county school as "very satisfactory." The management is "efficient and doing a good administrative job, considering the difficulties they are working under in respect to more or less antiquated equipment, old buildings and a limited budget."

The minority report, filed by a negro member of the grand jury, Howard H. Murphy, declared:

"Prince Georges county seems to regard Cheltenham as an private political plum and through its control of the board membership foists upon this institution the incompetent political employees whom Commissioner Jones (State Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones) says are unfit."

Murphy said an investigation at the school showed "barns and cowsheds are far superior in structure and cleanliness to the dormitories."

Only One Missing

London (AP)—Of more than 30,000 militiamen called up during a recent week at camps all over Britain, only one was missing. It was found he had joined the regular army.

No War Discussions In Newark Taverns

Newark, N. J., Sept. 12 (AP)—The European war has been fought so heatedly in Newark taverns that proprietors are invoking neutrality measures to keep the peace.

A typical sign in one of them reads:

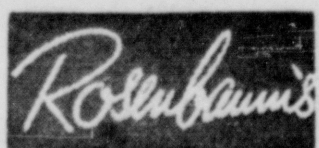

"The U. S. is neutral—so are we. To avoid fights and arguments, do not discuss the war on these premises."

Netherlands Ship Is Fired Upon

Algerias, Spain, Sept. 12 (AP)—Windows trembled with vibration of shots from Gibraltar batteries fired at a Netherlands merchantman.

The vessel failed to halt when signalled to do so by control ships.

The Netherlands captain when finally stopped was fined costs—the value of the shells fired at him.

A Worried Man

IT LOOKS AS IF Hitler had made a terrible mistake. We are not referring to his possible assumption that Britain and France at the last moment would prefer a second Munich to the terrors of war over a small nation of no great intrinsic value to either of them. Perhaps he was too optimistic about this, but even so he must have considered the possibility of the fulfillment of the pledge to Poland and pondered what his course would be then.

This is where the big error came. Hitler's plan apparently was to overwhelm Poland as rapidly as possible, and then, with Mussolini primed to be the intercessor, offer peace on the basis of gains already made. With the conquest of Poland already a fact, he assumed that an ingratulating overture with pledges of long-standing peace in Europe would be received with rejoicing in England and France.

The trouble with Hitler is that he doesn't understand people. He is unaware that when even a worm turns, it turns for good; and the British lion is no worm. England and France are not fighting primarily to save Poland but to "end Nazism." They have stood all they can. Hitler's pledges have meant less than nothing, because he used them to gain further ends. It is becoming apparent that nothing will satisfy the Nazi fuhrer except complete domination of the entire continent. Poland is only an incident, as were Austria and Czechoslovakia.

Now that both France and England have laid their cards on the table, Hitler must realize that his conquest of Poland will be not the end but the beginning of the real war. And unless he is denser than usual, he is probably the most worried man in the world today. This war isn't going to be fought at the expense of France alone. Already the allies have penetrated German territory, and for the first time in nearly a century the German people know what it means to have the homeland laid waste by shells and bombs.

In the World war it took a long time for the Germans to rise in revolt. While everything was going their way, it seemed foolish to rebel against the Kaiser and his Junkers. But now the German people are by no means united. If in peace there were secret dissent, in war, especially a war that comes close home, the likelihood of internal upheaval is strong. One outstanding defeat for the Nazi troops, and the gambling will turn to something more militant.

More Gambling

AT FIRST GLANCE you might say that the Commodity Credit Corporation is a glutton for punishment. On sober reflection, however, you can't escape the conclusion that it's the taxpayer who is taking all the punishment while the spendthrift agency is trying to grab off all of the credit.

You will remember, of course, that after much weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth by Henry A. Wallace, Congress relented in its final hours and gave the agency $119,000,000, which it previously had refused to make up for "impairment of capital."

And how, pray, was that capital impaired? Tut, tut, don't you remember? First it gambled on cotton and lost $122,000,000. Then it took a couple of fliers in corn and dropped $50,000,000.

To use pat phrases of the president, what with "gambling with the future" and "gambling with other people's money" it dropped a tidy little $213,000,000 of your money.

Now that the agency has its $119,000,000 it's going to take another flier in corn. And indications are that the outcome of this venture will be no less disastrous than what happened before. Loans are to be made on the surplus corn to keep prices from sagging and, of course, the government must hold as collateral the corn on which the loans are made.

But the bins already are filled. Besides, the government must take possession by October 1 of the unredeemed corn on which the earlier loans were made.

So what is the answer? Mr. Wallace is going to build 25,500 new steel storage bins at a cost of $3,811,520—of course, at your expense—to store more corn on which you can lose more money.

Extolling the value of experience, a great poet wrote "great are the uses of adversity."

Adversity, apparently, means nothing to Mr. Wallace, but after all, it isn't his adversity, it's the taxpayer's headache. And what 100 per cent New Dealer gives a hoot for the taxpayer?

A War at Home

THE KEYSTONE AUTOMOBILE CLUB calls on all motorists to "help win the American war against the senseless killing and maiming of our citizens on the highways."

"We all are horrified by the reports from Europe," said George E. Keneipp, Manager of the club. "We shudder at the news of wholesale slaughter of men, women and children, as well we may. But in our concern for the victims of war, we should not lose sight of our responsibilities at home. Our highways are the battlefront on which the American war against sudden death and crippling injury must be fought to a successful conclusion. Discouraging reports showing accident increases for the first part of the year should act as a stimulus to make the remaining months safer for both walkers and riders."

The club official announced that the opening of schools marks the launching of one of the most comprehensive safety educational programs in the club's history.

In addition to the primary school program, thousands of high school pupils will be trained in motor vehicle operation, both theoretically and practically, through use of Keystone's Highway Safety Textbook, which has been made a part of the regular curriculum in many high schools during the past few years.

The club's 1939-40 school safety program will carry on former years' accident prevention work by a great variety of promotional methods. Approximately 60,000 safety posters and 15,000 pieces of safety literature will be regularly supplied to 1,600 schools during the scholastic year. White Sam Browne belts and arm bands will also be issued to members of the club's school safety squads. In addition, Keystone will distribute 50,000 copies of the recently published Safe Cycling pamphlet and an equal number of safe cycling bronze lapel insignias in its campaign to curtail the rising bicycle accident toll.

Good results should accrue from all these efforts, which call for the support of everybody.

Another Poll

DESPITE the disastrous effect of one polling of public sentiment on one, the magazines continue to go in for such registrations.

Among the latest is one by the magazine Look. This was taken among congressmen and shows how they are betting on the 1940 presidential election. Although only thirty-eight per cent of them are Republican, forty-seven per cent thereof think the Republicans will win in 1940. This is two per cent higher than the figures polled for the Democrats. Eight per cent of the legislators are recorded as undecided as to who would win. If they were just afraid to say, which is likely, here is an equation that indicates a betting majority for Republican success in the total.

Declaring that congressmen are considered to be the nation's best-informed people on the subject of national politics, Look says the survey reveals Vandenberg as the probable 1940 Republican candidate. Forty-four per cent of the congressmen held this opinion. Twenty-two per cent thought it would be Taft and twelve per cent said Dewey. Republican runners-up were Bridges, of New Hampshire; Martin, of Massachusetts; and McNary, of Oregon.

Forty-three per cent of the congressmen believed Roosevelt would be the Democratic nominee with Garner running a second at thirteen per cent and Hull next with nine per cent. The runners-up include Farley, McNutt, Hopkins, Governor Stark and Senator Clark, of Missouri; Senator Gillette, of Iowa; and Jesse Jones, federal loan administrator.

All of which is interesting, more or less. But a lot of water will run over the dam between now and the conventions and the election.

An Absurdity

COTTON and the futile efforts of the federal government to control it still provide a set of headaches.

"When the subsidizing of an American crop permits the American commodity to be purchased abroad and shipped back for less than it costs in the United States," remarks the Christian Science Monitor, "it is time to withdraw the subsidy."

"The paradoxical situation is illustrated in the case of cotton," it continues. "In order to prevent under-cutting of the American market, the United States Tariff Commission has laid quotas on imports of cotton and cotton waste. The thought of import restrictions being necessary in the greatest cotton-producing country in the world is ridiculous."

Thus, as the Monitor declares, government paternalism, no matter how well-intentioned, becomes an absurdity.

With nations all about them getting prepared for a war, the folk in Switzerland must certainly be glad that the Alps are useful for other purposes than just furnishing an echo.

With Europe's capitals in nightly blackouts, the war has had one advantage for Europeans. It's cut down mightily on electric light bills.

Mussolini has almost achieved the impossible. He's almost as silent over the German-Polish crisis as is the League of Nations.

Montaigne and the Movies

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Whenever I see a motion picture that's been made by Frank Capra of Hollywood, I remember reading that this man likes to read the essays of Montaigne. Capra, as you probably know, makes pictures as he pleases and the pictures he makes are the envy of his associates. So he can read an old French philosopher if he wishes and nobody accuses him of "high-browism." . . . In fact he will quote you passages from the pages of a man who lived in the city of Bordeaux, France, nearly four centuries ago.

It does strike me oddly, however, that the wise Montaigne should be so important to a man of this age who works at something of which Montaigne could not ever have dreamed. . . . And yet it is not so very odd, for men have not changed as much as we sometimes think. He knew how to get along in his age as much as any clever man knows how in this century.

Michel de Montaigne lived in a violent generation of civil war in which intemperate bands of soldiers were out of hand and pillaging the countryside. And yet in all those years no soldier ever entered the home of Montaigne. He kept them out by refusing to bar his door against them. In the midst of that menace he had written:

"Defense allures the enterprising and distrust provokes them. I have baffled the designs of the soldier by depriving the exploit of all danger and all chance of military glory which have usually provided them with an excuse and a pretext. Every courageous deed is an honorable deed in times when justice is dead. I have thus made the conquest of my house a cowardly action and a treachery. . . . It is provided with no other safeguard but a porter with old-fashioned ceremonious manners whose office is not to forbid my door, but rather to offer it with more grace and decorum."

"The fact that so many strongly guarded houses have been destroyed while mine endures makes me suspect that they were destroyed because they were strongly guarded. . . . For my part, I do not budge. I will neither fear nor save myself by halves."

Thus Montaigne saved himself in a savage world, and preserved a quiet space around him in which he wrote his immortal essays. . . . And though I do not know how Frank Capra of Hollywood won his way to the top in Hollywood, I am sure that the secret is somewhere in the writings of a Montaigne.

Perhaps Capra would advise others, too, to read in Montaigne for a few minutes every day. If you give fifteen minutes of your time to that great man you will give yourself half an hour. And if you read him for hours, you will remember his wisdom all the rest of your life.

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

There is throughout America a great company of reformed elbow-benders who, as alumni of the Kelley Institute, will be cheering for an old alma mater on September 17, when the sixtieth anniversary of the institute will be celebrated, at Dwight, Ill. They will dedicate a bronze plaque to Dr. Leslie E. Keeley and his two associates, John R. Oughton and Major Curtis J. Judd.

Dr. Keeley has been dead a generation now. But the good he did lives after him, and I have an idea that this celebration will flush more poignant memories around the crossroads, whistling posts and sizeable small towns of the country than anything Thornton Wilder or Sinclair Lewis could think up in their mellow and not so mellow retrospect.

I'm not thinking of Aurora, Ind., alone. I could tell you of Tanglefoot, Pete, a story of the town souse and how old Doc Kyle collected some money and sent him to Dwight, and how he came back, sober as an owl, and got a good job as bookkeeper at the iron wheel factory and sent his children to college. But it would be just one of a multitude, and you probably can think of a better one from your old home town.

In my boyhood there was an organization of about 30,000 Dwight alumni, with nearly 400 local lodges in every state in the union and auxiliaries in which wives, mothers and sisters were enrolled. They held a national convention and the members' insignia, won in the button-hole, was a horseshoe. That was because the league was formed in a blacksmith shop.

A Smart Man

"Dan Hubbard is one of the smartest men in Poseyville. He would be in Congress right now if it wasn't for whiskey. He certainly is a well-posted man. You ought to hear him quote Shakespeare. If he was in Congress and he recited that piece about the seven ages of man they'd make him president." You will distinctly remember how your father and the postmaster saw Dan off on the early morning train and how an impromptu reception committee hailed him joyfully when he came back cured, and how he hooked up with Judge Prouty's law practice and took his old place as the best lawyer in the county.

In a big city it doesn't make so much difference if one or two men, more or less, are on the skids. But in small-town America, where everybody knows who your folks were, how much money you have, and just at what hour you went home last night, your slide into the gutter becomes a matter of great public concern, and affectionate concern, too, which is perhaps more important.

Mr. H. L. Mencken might disagree, but I believe that this is the soil in which true democracy flourishes. If the word means anything—it's being run ragged these days—it means that the dignity and well-being of any single human being is in some mysterious way important. Your old man was a real democrat when he was worrying about the town drunk and helping send him to Dwight. That's one reason why I find a big slice of reassuring Americana in this Keeley cure celebration.

Dr. Keeley, a native of Lawrence county, New York, was a Civil war surgeon who settled in Dwight, in 1866. He attended the Rush medical college and while in the army investigated the effects of alcohol on Union soldiers. He became convinced that alcoholism was a disease. He continued his experiments after settling in Dwight. In 1879, he announced that he had found a cure for alcoholism, and established the Keeley Institute.

During the next decade, he encountered much skepticism in the medical profession and it was not until the early eighteen-nineties that he got into mass-production of reformed drunks. Joseph Medill, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, helped a lot by processing batches of soured reporters through the doctor's mill. Each got a grand dry-cleaning and lived happily ever after. Mr. Medill flared the news through the corn belt and today's anomaly is that the corn belt is celebrating a lessened demand for corn juice in those parts. As they gather at the old alma mater on September 17, the college hymn naturally will be "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes."—Copyright, 1939, King Features, Inc.

Neutrality Act Change by Congress Is Now Quite Likely, Sullivan Reports

Washington, Sept. 12.—The pertinent facts preceding President Roosevelt's expected call for a special session of Congress, go back to last January.

In that month Mr. Roosevelt asked Congress to take steps in view of conditions abroad. The first was to enact a measure for increased military and naval preparedness.

About preparedness, the Republican leader of the House, Mr. Joseph W. Martin, of Massachusetts, appointed a committee to study the subject. The committee concluded that the preparedness measure should be enacted. The committee so reported to a conference of the whole Republican membership of the House. The conference confirmed the committee's report. As a result, when the preparedness measure came to a vote, practically all the Republicans voted for it. Out of 435 members of the House, the "nay" votes were only fifteen. Some of the fifteen were Democrats, some Republicans. In the Senate, a vote in favor of the preparedness measure was seventy to eight. Of the eight, four were Democrats, four Republicans.

The other measure Mr. Roosevelt asked for was a revision of the neutrality act. The principal change he asked was from a provision absolutely forbidding sale of armament to belligerents, to a provision permitting sale provided the buyer nation pays cash in full and carries the purchased armament from America in its own ships.

Several developments. About the president's neutrality measure there were several developments. The House rejected it on two key roll-calls. On both roll-calls the majorities against the president's measure were slight—on one, twelve votes; on the other, two votes.

In the Senate, one of the strict isolation senators, who led the fight against the League of Nations seventeen years ago, Hiram Johnson of California, called an informal conference. While the conference was quite informal and unorganized, it was said that thirty-four senators attended, out of a total of ninety-six. Some who attended were Republicans, some Democrats. At the end of the conference Senator Johnson issued a statement to the effect that "we are unalterably opposed" to modification or repeal of the neutrality act. Some who had attended the conference said later that while they were sympathetic to extreme caution about preserving neutrality, they did not feel bound by this statement. Some senators who attended the conference would have voted for the change the president wanted if it had come up. They will vote for it now, in the expected special session of Congress.

The measure was prevented from coming up in the Senate by an action of the Senate committee on Foreign Relations. The committee did not vote on the neutrality measure directly. It decided, by a vote of twelve to eleven, to postpone consideration until the next session of Congress. The twenty-three members of the committee are divided into sixteen Democrats, five Republicans, one Farmer-Labor, one National Progressive.

The reasons why a majority of the House voted against changing the neutrality measure are to be found in the Congressional Record, in the reports of the several days of debate. Different reasons animated different groups. They are honest reasons held by sincere men. The question is most minds was the same—which course will do most to keep America out of war, whether forbidding sale of armament absolutely, or permitting it on the "cash and carry" plan.

After Congress did not do what Mr. Roosevelt had asked, he showed some public distaste. At two press conferences he said that the inaction of Congress made it more likely a crisis would arise in Europe, upon the theory that Hitler would have been less likely to precipitate war had he known that shipments of armament from America would be available to Britain and France. After the crisis arose, Mr. Roosevelt spoke again at a press conference, saying the failure of Congress to do what he asked had been a contributing factor in causing the crisis.

Stiffened Opponents. Mr. Roosevelt's action, in turn, caused some stiffening on the part of some who had voted against what he wished. This feeling, however, does not amount to enough to be material. Whenever Mr. Roosevelt calls the special session of Congress, his proposed neutrality measure will be considered in the light of existing conditions. Some who voted against making the change in July did so as the net of delicately balanced considerations. Of these, some will now be willing to change their positions. Some who were not present at the roll-call in July will now take care to be present.

Altogether it is extremely likely the change will be made. If so, we will sell armament on a cash and carry basis. Of course, the only nation able to take advantage of the changed neutrality measure will be those that command the sea, Britain and France.

While the change is likely to be made, there will be complete respect for the probably considerable number of members of Congress who will continue on the assumption that the better way for America to avoid involvement in war would be to forbid sale of armament absolutely.

EDITOR'S NOTE—This implication also is entirely gratuitous.

Perhaps you think that President Roosevelt mistakes facts when he spoke, not so long ago, about the one third of the nation who are ill-clad, ill-fed, and ill-housed, or that Secretary of the Interior Ickes lied when he told the American people about the sixty families who own and control America. Even the United Press reports, that the year 1938, twenty-eight trusts showed total assets of fifty-three billion dollars. This includes Morgans, Rockefellers, Pords, etc. You state that there are millions of small investors who own stocks and bonds in the big corporations. While it is true, that there are many investors who may own a few shares of stocks and bonds, there are 130 million people in this country and the majority of these millions, including between ten and fifteen million unemployed, go not own such stocks and bonds. For those that do own a few shares, this doesn't constitute the vast control of the big corporations since the sixty families have the large interest in them. If we take our own city of Cumberland for an example, where the majority of the population are workers for the big corporations, Celanese, mince, rubber, etc., we will find that the vast majority of our population here could never afford to invest in stocks and bonds, because their average wage is no more than between twenty and twenty-five dollars a week and then,

Anti-Trust Laws Hit by War Plans

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington, Sept. 12.—In our plans for the war mobilization of industry, which are forming fast we are going to strike one snag that had better be considered right now. Those plans, or the execution of them, are in absolute collision with the anti-trust acts on every front.

That is no theory. All such plans are merely variations of the 1918 plan for industrial mobilization. It must be so. There is no other way. It was followed by every other warring country and is being followed in them now.

To organize industry for war you must make "combinations in restraint of trade." You must allocate production, restrict competition, fix prices, encourage industries to unite, pool patents, exchange information and facilities and generally make one cohesive whole out of what before by law was ordained to be a warring mass of fiercely competitive units.

Is Present Plan

Exactly that is the present mobilization plan. I am speaking here from no confidential information. That part of the plan has been officially published. Yet exactly that is a complete list of all the monopolistic "abuses" and violations of the anti-trust acts upon which Attorney General Murphy has declared war and in respect of which Field Marshall Thurman Arnold is mobilizing a greatly increased force of bright young lawyers to prevent.

The right hand knoweth not what the left hand doeth. Again, as in NRA, we see one branch of government getting ready to prosecute as crimes what other branches are getting ready to insist upon as patriotic duties.

The Recovery act specially authorized the government to permit some of this but there is no present law to authorize any of it. There was no such authorization in the World war. The anti-trust acts simply went to sleep. The attorney general of the United States wrote several times to the chief of the War Industries Board protesting. They were friends and the chief law officer's principal delight was to shoot ducks at Mr. B. M. Baruch's home at Hobcaw. The latter finally answered something in this fashion: "Don't you read the papers? We have a war on our hands. Please don't write me more of those letters. It pains my sense of patriotism and propriety to drop a letter from the attorney general of the United States into the wastebasket. Furthermore, if I get another one of those things you are never going to shoot another duck at Hobcaw." There were no more letters.

That may sound a little frivolous now but it happened when the Germans were about forty miles from the Channel ports. It didn't sound frivolous then. It wouldn't in another similar case.

Only One Choice

There isn't any choice now except to get into another period of ignoring on a broad front, laws that officials are sworn to enforce or providing, as the Recovery act did, that action approved by the President as being in the public interest shall not be regarded as violations of the anti-trust laws.

If that is done—as in all common sense and conscience it should be done—then industry will have to be pretty well assured that it means what it says. The Federal Trade Commission and the department of justice never were reassuring to business about the validity of the NRA exemption. After NRA went out, a very high-handed attempt was made to prosecute those who claimed to have acted under them—notably in the oil industry.

If war comes near us there will be few in business who will not move forward to enlist with the government for complete cooperation. But if this absurd contradiction isn't attended to, then, of experience, it will be with some fear and misgiving. And that is no atmosphere in which to get the best work out of a team.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

they very rarely work twelve months out of a year.

You end your editorial by saying "that everybody, no matter how humble, can become interested in business in one way or another and thus become one of those who really own America." How can you people give the impression to the people in this community, who know so well their own circumstances, that it is easy to become a business man and be "one of those who really own America." The majority of people today are lucky to have a job, when they work for somebody else at a small wage today. Certainly everybody knows that the big corporations, the sixty families, have even squeezed out through competition, depressions, etc., countless numbers of small business men. But I suppose, if you exclude the unemployed and the wage earners who are correct, the business interests, who control the lives and destiny of the vast majority of the American people, really own America—that's the trouble with the country today.

Sincerely yours,
SAMUEL DEANE.

Thinking Needed To Save America

Attorney Speaks At Rotary Club

Rotarians heard a stirring address on the American form of government yesterday at the Port Cumberland hotel by Finley C. Hendrickson, attorney, and celebrated anniversaries of seven members whose birthdays fall within the coming week and in whose honor a specially baked birthday cake was provided.

Hendrickson's talk combined observances of Maryland's Defenders' day and Constitution day.

The fact that boundary line disputes between states of the union are amicably settled by the supreme court as provided in the federal constitution, the speaker said, provides a sharp contrast favoring the utility and endurance and superiority of the American republican form of government over those in Europe, where the formula for such settlements is force.

Boundary Disputes Avoided

Quarrels over boundary lines are the cause of wars in Europe, Hendrickson said, and these have occurred in cycles over the centuries. But in this country such disputes are settled in amicable fashion because the Founding Fathers had patiently thought out a form of government making for national unity and security which has welded our states into a splendid entity with no differing forms of statehood here and there, as is the case in Europe.

Maryland had a part in the prevention of boundary line wars, it was noted, having first caused settlement of one respecting the line between it and Pennsylvania, which served as a guide for all future action.

Let the Wise Men Think

The American form of government stands today as a paragon for the world, Hendrickson said, and it is the duty of every citizen to see that it is perpetuated without serious deviation from the secure foundations laid down by the Founding Fathers. The best security for us, it was declared, is to have our wisest men think things out carefully and patiently whenever crises or differences arise, as was the case when the federal constitution was drafted.

Liberty Cleaners Move To Modern Quarters In Old Footer Plant

Times change. The old Footer's Dry Works, once the largest plant of its kind in the United States, is now housing one of the many smaller units which helped to put it out of business.

The Liberty Cleaners and Dyers Inc. has become the owner and legal occupant of a sizeable part of the old Footer plant.

And the day when dry cleaning was a luxury and work came to Cumberland from all over the country has been almost forgotten.

The new plant is modern throughout, and is the largest dry cleaning plant in Maryland, outside of Baltimore, according to Raymond B. Fey, one of the officials of the corporation.

It will also house the only dry cleaning apparatus for rugs in Cumberland, according to Mr. Fey, and will have cold storage vaults for furs and woollens. The building is fire-proofed and burglar-proofed.

McNutt Believes FDR Has Strong Backing

Washington, Sept. 12 (AP)—Paul V. McNutt, administrator of the Federal Security Agency, said tonight he was "convinced that the bulk of the American people stand squarely behind the president" in his view on international affairs.

The people realize, McNutt said in a radio broadcast, "that their peace can never be safe so long as any nation or group of nations is at liberty to stage a raid upon any part of the earth not surrounded by a wall of steel."

He mentioned no country by a name.

McNutt expressed the belief the United States would stay out of war, but added that "come what may" there would be no interruption in the social security program.

Evangelical-St. Johns Tie Round Robin Play

With Emmanuel winning from Evangelical on Monday by a score of 6 to 3, and St. John's defeating U. B. on Tuesday by a score of 7 to 3, the round robin play-off stands two wins and one loss for Evangelical and St. John's. Evangelical and St. John's now will need one win in order to meet in the final play-off to decide the championship of the league.

On Monday Emmanuel came from behind in an extra inning affair to down Evangelical by a score of 6 to 3. W. Malone pitching for Emmanuel allowed only six hits, while his mates collected ten hits off D. Conway and M. Weltman. In the St. John's-United Brethren game which was called in the sixth inning because of darkness, United Brethren lost their game on errors, committing three in a row accounting for 5 St. John's runs.

On Thursday Emmanuel will take on Evangelical in their fourth game of the series, while on Friday, United Brethren will again meet St. John's in their fourth game. Both games at Brinker's Field at 5:30 p. m.

Company sources said the union demanded a thirty per cent. wage increase and other changes that the company was unwilling to grant.

Competitive Sales Disputed

The trucking firm is paying wages as high, if not higher, than competing lines in this area, according to the company spokesman.

Saunders charged, however, that the company is paying wages below the prevailing scale.

Saunders asserted that three negotiating conferences had been held since August 20.

The company spokesman said that Saunders had told the company that he had no power to change the proposed contract, that it had been approved by the union, and that it had to be accepted.

The union, an A. F. of L. affiliate, has had a closed shop contract with the company.

On High Roads

staked out a claim to a clump of grass, which was well fortified with poison ivy on three sides and a very unpromising stretch of river on the fourth.

We lay down in the grass for a good nap, but no sooner were we peacefully dreaming than we had a bite, and everybody up and down the river started shouting at us. It was a pesky rock bass.

All the fishermen were cursing the fish for not biting. The weather was perfect, the river was perfect, every artifice of the fisherman was being employed. Sure it was the fish that refused to enter into the spirit of things, they probably deserved the cursing they got.

The fishermen seemed to be enjoying the opportunity to grumble as much as they would have enjoyed catching fish.

But the poor fish, all up and down that river, and probably a lot of other rivers, were simply bored stiff.

These lines are intended as a sort of journalistic bomb-proof shelter for Mr. Simeon Green, president of the board of county commissioners.

Commissioner Green, who wants very much to be neutral, is being bombarded by WPA workers who think somebody ought to provide them free rides to and from their work at Savage River dam.

We point out that the county commissioners have nothing to do with providing transportation for WPA workers on the dam, unless they want to do so out of the goodness of their hearts. Mr. Green got mixed up in the thing only because he announced to the paper the results of a conference at which the Upper Potomac River Commission, sponsor of the project, and WPA officials, decided that the workers would have to get to the dam site above Bloomington the best way they can.

Since the county commissioners aren't sponsoring the project, Commissioner Green has nothing to do with no-free-rides decision. But a county commissioner always makes a good target when a voter gets mad enough to shoot at something.

We hope this explanation will help Commissioner Green maintain his neutrality in this case, at least.

City of Flint Due In Halifax Today

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 12 (AP)—In an atmosphere made tense by a mixture of joy, bewilderment and hope, this outpost port of a Canada at war tonight awaited arrival of the cargo ship City of Flint tomorrow with the first survivors of the sunken British liner Athenia to reach North America.

U. S. Consul Clinton E. Maceschran announced late today the last report from the American freighter timed at 11 a. m. (Eastern Standard Time) placed her about 180 miles from Halifax and said she would reach here tomorrow, probably before noon.

Waiting here, anxious relatives and friends of persons on the ill-fated Athenia closely watched last minute revisions in the "tentative" list of the 200 survivors the City of Flint was reported carrying, 110 of them Americans.

The freighter had regular accommodations for only six passengers and many were asking "how could they live for nine days?"

Radio Station Must Explain Broadcasts

Washington, Sept. 12 (AP)—The Federal Communications Commission today called upon radio station WMCA of New York City to show cause why it should not be ruled off the air on a charge of intercepting and broadcasting military secrets of Germany and Great Britain.

The FCC said the commission "has information in its possession tending to establish that the Knickerbocker Broadcasting Company, Inc., licensee of station WMCA, New York, caused the interception of secret radio communications sent by the governments of Germany and Great Britain, respectively, containing orders to the naval or military forces of said governments to govern the movement of said forces in time of war, and thereafter caused the said messages to be decoded and broadcast over the facilities of station WMCA, all without authority of the respective senders."

The order explained that this country has agreed with foreign governments "to take all the measures possible" to insure the "security of international correspondence."

MORE TELEPHONES

One of the commentators on the recent increase in number of telephone installations calls it "a puzzler for the business analyst." It seems that Ohio installations set a new all-time peak in May, and increase has been general all over the country.

But why puzzle? One of the last things a worker passes up is his telephone. It's his chance of getting a new job, as well as a great convenience, and one of the first things he puts back when he gets even a part-time job. Once upon a time there was a "call boy" for workers who worked irregular schedules. Now the boss lifts his receiver and expects the workers to lift theirs when the bell rings.

The office which did without extensions during the worst years, but had learned to depend on them, hurries them back in as soon as it with a telephone. Its uses are manifold.

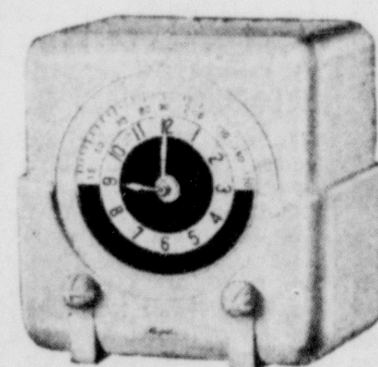

The luxury of yesterday becomes the matter-of-fact convenience of today, the necessity of tomorrow.

Why not give your family the advantages and protection of a telephone? The rates are surprisingly low. Call our office for details.

Hoofing It To Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

"HOW'S the hoofing these days?" "Any easy on your feet? Are your feet easy on you? If the answer to both questions is yes, you are lucky. Considering the kind of crazy shoes the girls have been wearing, it is a wonder we aren't all walking on our hands so as to give the poor feet a rest."

The best general toning treatment for burning feet is a daily bath with warm water to which boric acid has been added. This should be followed by a brisk friction with a coarse towel to stimulate circulation, and the skin surface dusted over with an antiseptic powder compounded for the purpose. Powders absorb moisture and banish discomfort. High heels are responsible for many troubles, as every woman of sense should realize. They not only deform the feet but they are sometimes responsible for a ewe neck, which isn't pretty. If posture isn't what it should be, they'll throw the tummy out and the chest in, which is about as terrible a combination as any feminine shape can be afflicted with. We're referring to extremely high heels. Spikes!

Many a girl bawls about weak ankles which wouldn't be that way if she would wear on foot instead of silly casings with toes and heels wedged in the open, no support to speak of.

Nine out of ten adults are afflicted with some form of foot defect. Out of 100 foot ailments, 68 are among women, 32 among men. (Vanity, all is vanity!)

Take an eagle's eye view of cosmetic counters. You will be doing well by yourself to glimpse the new shades of rouge, lipstick and powder. And don't forget eye shadows. They're ducky with the evening pebe, if you know how to use them, get them on in the right pattern.

When applying lid coloring, start at the inner corner, close to the lashes, sweep out along the lash line,

There's lots of news in hair ornaments this season. And lots of news in how they're worn.

Take that little matter of tuck combs. Tuck combs were originally designed merely to keep the hair in place. Ingenious women, however, began, adorning them with all sorts of things. Presto! The tuck comb passed from a purely utilitarian item to an ornament.

One smart young woman shellacked lima and kidney beans and seed corn, and sewed them to a band of hemp which she in turn sewed to the top of the comb. Another punctured tiny sea shells and fastened them to a piece of white

Fresh flowers, too, have been wired to combs of various sizes and shapes and used in other coiffure ornaments.

A coronet of fresh red roses was a stunning accessory worn by a willow brunnette whose gown was of very dull rose watered silk.

A row of small purple asters attached to a tortoise shell barrette held several Southern belle curls together at the nape of a petite blonde debutante's neck.

Even summer brides have taken to wearing their flowers in their hair instead of carrying them. A coronet of fresh lilies-of-the-valley held one bride's tulle veil in place. Her only other flowers were a few additional lilies-of-the-valley on the

"The Authority on Authorities"

CAN'T YOU HEAR? IF YOUR partner figuratively shouts at you at the top of his voice by means of a high-low signal while discarding, you have no earthly excuse for disregarding his come-on request unless you possess an absolutely certain defense against the contract in your own hand. If there is the slightest doubt about the success of some other line of defense, you must do exactly as your partner has asked unless you would rather lose than win.

South got into 3-No Trumps on this deal after starting out with 1-Club. West bid 1-Diamond, North 1-Heart, South 2-Clubs, North 2-Hearts, South 2-No Trumps and North 3-No Trumps. West properly opened his diamond 5, the Q winning, and a club then led to the K and A, followed by the club Q, heart A and the club 7 to the J.

On the second club lead, East discarded the spade 8 and on the third club lead the spade 2. Had West paid attention to this and led a spade to East's A, the return of a diamond through South would have defeated the contract two tricks. West, however, paid no heed to the spade signal, but led the A and then another diamond. The declarer thereupon finished his clubs and led to the spade Q and A. East having no more diamonds, returned his last spade, so that the declarer made his contract.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Now Loves Another

Dear Miss Fairfax: When I had barely passed my 16th birthday, I married and a year later we had a darling little baby boy, who is now three years old. Up to the present time I felt that my husband meant everything to me. About two months ago, I became acquainted with a young man, who seems to be the one I really care for. I haven't told anyone, but it seems as though I should go crazy trying to keep it to myself.

This young man has shown in many different ways that he too loves me. My husband tells me he loves me, but doesn't try to keep me happy by taking me out or asking friends in, so that we could have a little social life. It just seems impossible for me to get along without this new-found love. What can I do?

UNHAPPY
Our "darling little baby boy" is the answer to your problem, my dear. If you do a mother's duty to him, you will not let yourself imagine that you have found someone else the love of your life. This so often happens when a girl carries as young as you have and doesn't have a chance to enjoy youth and all the fun and admiration which is youth's due.

The young man knows you are married and have a boy. Don't risk losing home, husband and child for the slight chance of happiness involved in this temporary affair. Courage and common sense, my dear, is your antidote. Try to refigure the fancy of your husband and him to take you out occasionally. A little cooperation is up to you also.

She Loves to Tease Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The girl with whom I'm in love is very pretty, intelligent and works hard. She has a father, but does not live with him, and her mother is dead. Therefore, she supports herself, and does very well.

She has a habit of opposing everything I want to do. If I suggest going to the movies, or any kind of entertainment, she doesn't want to go. And she always wants to do just the opposite of what I suggest. When I ask her why she treats me in this manner, she merely replies that she liked to tease me and see me when I get "mad."

She's always telling me about some other boys she knows. However, I must be fair and say she claims she doesn't care about any of them. She makes me think she likes me very much, and I'm sure we could both be happy if I could only figure her out.

MARTIN

These are all very promising symptoms, my dear boy. Don't you know that girls delight in teasing those they love? It's just good old-fashioned coquetry on the part of the young lady—the same brand your grandmother and great grandmother indulged in when they wanted to bring grandpapa and great grandpapa to terms.

Nothing is lacking in your case except congratulations — and here goes!

A Nazi Seaman Meets Foul Weather

Newcastle, N. B. (P) —They tell this story here: A seaman came ashore wearing trousers of the usual length made in Germany from the same kind of New Brunswick pulpwood that was being loaded aboard his ship. Rain fell. The seaman, in what appeared to be knee-length shorts, beat a retreat to his freighter. His trousers were OK. The next day the German ship carried an appliance for stretching the "ersatz" product after shrinking.

Crime Remedy Ought To Begin At Baby's Crib

Powerful Letter Received from Country Doctor
Stresses Point

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.
From Minnesota I received this letter:

"Dear Dr. Myers: It is about time the public listen to your sound ideas about the crime problem. Of course, the remedy has to start at the crib and in many cases earlier yet—with the germ plasm, with eugenics. From a degenerate stock one cannot expect well-behaved offspring. And when the early home environment is morally poor, what can you expect?"

"Children need the love, the tenderness of their parents, just as much as they need food and shelter; but there is no love, no respect, none of the better things in a disrupted home. Seeing the parents drunk, immoral, quarreling most of the time and planning crime, is certainly not a healthful home environment. . . .

"One of the troubles in modern homes is that some parents are strangers to each other; that there is no real affection, only a search for support. When children are not wanted or when one is made a favorite over the others, the effect is very bad. . . .

Children Greatest Sufferers
"In any form of marital maladjustment, children are the innocent and greatest sufferers. This fact parents should consider, so as to try to make the best out of marriage for the sake of their children. . . .

"There is rarely the right kind of parent-child relationship when the child does not come from a love match. Love is really the best cement to bind the members of a family together. Love is much stronger than all psychology; even stronger than the well-meant words of the clergyman. Love is also the best tonic. It makes people strong for enduring the strain and stress of everyday life. Love is the best adjuster; spontaneously it takes care of almost everything. But real love is not found abundantly, and that is where so much woe comes in."

Great Sermons from Doctors
The foregoing is not from a preacher but from a country doctor. What great sermons some family doctors preach, face to face with their patients, day after day! They are in a position to be heard thoughtfully. I have often thought of the great good the family doctor can do apart from drugs and surgery; and many of them do dispense such good. I am reminded here of what Charles Darwin's father (a family doctor) told Charles, to the effect that most of a doctor's patients need more than medical advice.

If you are interested in such problems as obedience and discipline in the child, and all sorts of other human problems related to his upbringing, write me in care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it, and let me send you a list of books and pamphlets bearing on these matters.

Q What do you think of correspondence courses?
A Some are excellent for those who have the self-discipline to do the lessons alone. As a rule, however, no course by mail can be as good as a similar course with a good teacher in a night school. Before you sign up for any home study course you should ascertain the rating and reliability of the correspondence school by writing the U. S. Office of Education, Washington, D. C.

Before diamonds were cut, the shape of a stone meant a lot to its owner. Triangular stones were thought to cause quarrels; a square stone filled its owner with vague fears, and a five-cornered one caused violent death. Only the six-cornered stone was productive of good.

Effect on Morals and Christianity Is Greatest Danger of European War In Opinion of Michigan's Governor

By WM. A. BAKER, JR.
Lansing, Mich., Sept. 8.—"Declaration of war today endangers morals and Christianity, and that is the greatest danger in the present crisis," asserts Luren D. Dickinson, 80-year-old governor of Michigan, who for more than 50 years has been active in affairs of the Republican party and of the Methodist church.

"The power of the American people to keep out of war is in prayer," Dickinson observed, "but at the present time prayer is perfunctory in a way. You will find that there are prayers in most of the church services—but is there any contact? I think a weakness of the church is that spiritual contact is lacking."

"In the present situation the church is the responsible organization, but it isn't meeting the demands."

Charity Is Needed
"The moment we think of war and all the things that go with it, we lose charity. Nations must be charitable. They have to yield occasionally."

"Since the nation is made up of states and communities and of down to families and individuals, when we effect the individual life we're bound to affect the whole community; and when we can have enough influence on the individual life we shall prevent war. People bring into their homes such matters as consenting and participating. In this way we get a movement and a carrying force with it that would call up action of a nation as it would an individual or a household."

"With so much discussion of war in homes and churches, one of the weaknesses of the clergy is that it worships grammar and rhetoric and diction more than it realizes. There are a lot of people in front with a lot of faults that ought to be brought before them rather than forgotten in oratory."

"A minister was called in some time ago to give a prayer at the state senate. He laid down a type-written manuscript. I couldn't just convince myself that his prayer ever got beyond the people before him—that it ever got outside where God Almighty could hear it."

"The Christian church, carrying out the teachings of the Bible, never will be harmed from within—the danger is from outside indifference to the teachings of Christ," the aged executive stated.

"Father and Father"
"Although a fellow may be a loyal Christian, these outside influences may suggest that certain acts are all right. Games of chance, for instance, for small stakes. Then the person goes farther and farther. In spite of a real desire to be a true Christian he has substituted these other things for Christian acts. He doesn't go to church or to prayer meeting or to family prayers. Instead he is off at a dancing party or games."

"I never make it a practice to condemn acts of amusement," explained Dickinson, whose denunciation of "high life" has excited widespread comment. "I place the matter before young people," he said, "and God Almighty decides for them. The strange part of it has been that after I gave a talk of that kind a number came to me and said they had indulged, but they didn't like it—it was the environment that caused them to do it. If they knew there were others who wouldn't indulge in questionable amusement, then they wouldn't."

"Eighty per cent of my personal mail," Dickinson commented, "now consists of letters endorsing my stand on social questions." The governor's fan mail has increased to Governor Dickinson receives a batch of 200 fan letters from one of his secretaries, one-fifth of his daily average.

1,000 letters a day. Many commend Dickinson's courage.
"I never hesitate to state where I got the courage," he said quietly. "Anyone else can have it if he sees fit. I never had faith of a higher degree," he added, "than I have at the present time."
"Even when we adopt the Christian way of handling things we can't get away from the evils of war," the governor reflected. "We must consider these evils as well as what you might call the glory of war."
"Today the evils of war ought to be hammered into every element of society. Our efforts should be to place this before the American people—not to be converted by

Europe Goes Crazy over Horses

Dublin, Erie (AP)—International tension in Europe has boosted Eire's export trade in horseflesh to a new high.
Buyers for the German, French, Swiss and Belgian governments, touring the country following Dublin's famed horse show, are paying up to $350 for army horses and gunners—a new record.
France has forbidden all horseflesh exports.
Switzerland, now a European clearing house for war steeds, has been buying close to 2,000 Irish horses a year.
Shipments of horses from Eire to Germany rocketed to a new record this month. One batch of 100, for current German maneuvers, was shipped direct to Hamburg.

West Virginia Apples Go Long Way from Home

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 12 (AP)—If you buy an apple in Tel Aviv, Palestine, or in Buenos Aires, Argentina, it's a good bet, says James G. Marples, that your purchasing one which was grown in Berkeley County, W. Va.
Marples, head of one of the biggest orchards in this section, said Buenos Aires is the most distant point to which apples from this section are shipped. Both the South American city and the Jewish colony in Palestine are more than 6,000 miles distant.
In Tel Aviv apples encounter more than stiff competition from the citrus fruits, says Marples. "Hundreds of orange trees have been put out by the enterprising Jewish colonists and a large glass of the fruit juice costs only one penny."
"Yet, Palestine has no apple trees and we ship in about 500 car-loads of apples each year. In addition to the competition from the oranges, we apple growers also have to meet that from the dates which also are extremely plentiful and very cheap."

In past years, the apple was considered a very rare delicacy in a majority of the South American countries, the grower said. "Formerly wealthy Argentines quartered an apple at the conclusion of an elaborate banquet and, as the final delicacy, served each guest with two slices." Jerusalem-bound apples are about a month en route.

Today's GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Timely tips on transplanting trees

In moving large trees or trees difficult to transplant, it is best to do the actual moving during the Winter when the trees are dormant and when the ground is frozen. If a tree is moved during the Winter the balls of earth on the roots can be counted upon to remain fairly intact.

There are some things to be done this Fall, however, if you plan to transplant trees this Winter. For example, trees should be root pruned, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph, a season before they are to be moved or at the very latest in the preceding Fall. To root prune in preparation for transplanting, make a deep cut or dig a trench all around the tree, as illustrated. Do this just within the area where you intend to dig the root ball for transplanting.

The trench should be packed with well-rotted compost. This will encourage the fibrous feeding roots to form where the cut has been made and these roots will help greatly to sustain the health of the tree when it is transplanted.

"Being 'broke' by two depressions and saddened by the deaths of both his first and second wife doesn't get a man like Warner down.

"I must entertain myself or I'd lose all respect for myself," the once thriving grocer and real estate man said, then started crocheting.

Recently he completed a 3½ by 9½-foot rug in a month, cutting, sewing and crocheting the 3,000 yards of material by himself. He makes rugs of all colors, blue, green, yellow, orange, purple, (the proper

Late Buying Boosts Stock Prices After a Day of Cashing in Profits

Rails and Utilities Heavily Sold until Near Closing

BY FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, Sept. 12 (AP)—Late buying in rails and utilities today turned a profit-taking tumble in the recently buoyant steel and other stock market "war babies" into a brisk rally that converted early losses running to six or more points into net gains of four or so.

Bethlehem Steel, the spectacular climber of yesterday, was hit for a drop of 6 5/8 points in the forenoon, but was off only 1 at the close, while U. S. Steel, down 3 at one time, emerged with a net advance of 4 1/2 at a new high for the year.

Crysler, behind 1 3/8 at the worst, came out 4 7/8 ahead, also at a new 1935 peak. Prominent on the last-minute bulge were Youngstown Sheet & Tube, General Motors, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania, Chesapeake & Ohio, Consolidated Edison, Northern American International Harvester, Loft, American Can, International Nickel and Johns-Manville.

While an assortment of recent sprinters were in the minus column at the closing, sufficient advances were present to put the Associated Press average of 60 issues up 7 of a point at 52.9.

The ticker tape was as much as 4 minutes in arrears on the forenoon sell-off and equally late during the final turn-around. There were intermittent slow periods, however, and transfers for the five hours amounted to 4,168,590 shares against 4,678,840 yesterday.

Curb gains of fractions to more than a point included Aluminum Co., American Cyanamid "B", American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share and Humble Oil. Posting small declines were Creole Petroleum and E. W. Bliss. Transactions were 646,000 shares against 745,000 yesterday.

Labels on Drugs Must Be True Under New Law

Active Ingredients Must Be Specifically Declared

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
From now on, if you buy a solution that says it will kill germs, it must kill germs. And if you buy a mouth wash or a nose spray that kills germs "in two minutes," it must do that (or it must have an inhibitory effect on prolonged contact). So says Uncle Sam's new Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic law, which also makes several improvements over the old law in respect to labeling drugs.

It requires that the active ingredients must be declared on the label, as well as the proportion or quantity of certain potent drugs. For instance, your fat reducer, which is "harmless," must show on the label whether it contains thyroid extract or dinitrophenol, and how much.

Omission of a material fact makes a label false. Labels must even declare the existence, if any, of a difference of opinion among qualified scientists.

Appear on Label
Certain drugs must appear on the label, whether active in the mixture or not: bromides, acetaminol, phenacetin, amidopyrine, atropine, mercury, thyroid, hyoscine or hyoscyamine.

Warnings against probable misuse must also appear. The law enforces the statement, "Warning—may be habit-forming," when certain drugs are in the container, including barbituric acid (veronal), amibis, chloral, cocaine, codeine, morphine, marihuana, paraldehyde, and opium (mesal).

Of course, most of these drugs cannot be sold without a doctor's prescription. In many, but not all, cases the barbiturates cannot be sold. But vendors often have a way of getting around this. An asthma remedy may contain cocaine. The asthma victim writes in for a bottle of the "cure." A doctor employed by the firm writes a prescription and the medicine is sent out.

The enforcement proceedings of the new bill strengthen the government's hand mightily. Under the old law, the government could seize products that were adulterated, fraudulently labeled or filthy—but not because they were dangerous.

Had to Prove Intent
There was a joker in the old law. It stated that the government had to prove that false claims to curative effect were made by the manufacturer with wilful intent. It was very difficult to prove what a man's intent is.

Now, if a common weed is sold as a "cure" for diabetes, or some salts as a "slenderizer," it can be stopped without bothering about the mental state of the vendor.

Cosmetics which are dangerous will be banned. This part of the law has been in effect for a year. Eighty shipments of poisonous cosmetics have been seized, 30 of which had an eyelash dye which has caused blindness. The manufacturers were prosecuted, convicted and fined in 23 counts involving fines of $100 each, but the court announced on payment of $250 the judgment would be satisfied.

Understand that the Ohio man who was blinded by eyelash has spent over $10,000 on hospital expenses. The doctors, I am told, say, have never charged anything.

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

"I EXPECT they'll be coming in most any minute, Jerry," George Brazee was saying. "It's getting on toward four o'clock. You can figure they just decided to stay in town for dinner; lunch, that is."

"Even then they'd have time to get back here," young Jerry Dale declared. He and Mr. and Mrs. Brazee and the black boy Midnight were talking at the ranch blacksmith shop. Jerry had been concerned about Lorena and Shot all day.

"Well, you got to figure they aren't in no hurry, son," George Brazee chuckled. "You're not blind. Surely you have seen that Shot's sort of taken with Lorena. You are yourself. Now admit it, eh?"

"That's not the point," snapped Jerry. "I—"

"Well, it's a good point, whether you admit it or not. Now don't go pawing any dirt at me. I'm not butting in on you youngsters' love affairs. I'm just telling you that your rival has taken Lorena in to Blanco—why, they might've decided to ride the stage on in to Douglas to see a moving picture show, who can tell?"

"Nuts," growled Jerry. "Hit's a heap of cowboys likin' Miss Lorena, yeah!" Midnight put in.

"Is that a fact, Midnight?" George Brazee grinned at his black protegee. "How do you happen to know?"

"Who-wee, Mistuh George, they promises me money to help 'em court her, yassuh. I has to go to tell her how kind and all they is."

"How? What's that? Come on, Midnight, I've got a quarter—maybe a half dollar. Tell me what's been going on."

Mrs. Brazee spoke sharply to him. "George Brazee, I declare! If you aren't just an old busybody, trying to bribe this boy to tell you a lot of gossip. Why don't you mind your own affairs so nobody'll gossip about you?"

But George Brazee's eyes were twinkling and his large body was shaking in laughter now. He ignored his wife. "Go on, boy, you want this half dollar?"

"Mistuh George, you knows I'd do anything in de world you wants. And for a half dolluh, suh, I'd do more'n that."

"Hush, Midnight!" Sally put in. "Go 'long about your business somewhere. You come to the kitchen directly, and I'll have some cake for you. And don't you trust this white man. I'll give you the half dollar myself."

"Yessum, Miss Sally, thank you, ma'am," Midnight was grinning. He realized he had made a good business deal. He took himself tactfully away.

"Rogers' men are more or less bluffing along without a leader, while he is off wasting time with a girl," Jerry Dale said now, significantly. "I don't need to point out—do I?—that Rogers hasn't done a confounded thing. You've lost more cows since he and his so-called army took charge. He was going to do this and that to Luis Escobar. What has he done?"

George Brazee was still in a devilish mood, still grinning. "He's found him a girl."

"Nuts on that! I'm not concerned with Lorena. I mean—"

"You mean that's the very trouble. Shot's concerned with her, and you'd like to be. If you could find her, I bet you would be, eh Jerry?"

"Hush it, George! You're talking too much," Mrs. Brazee was in earnest now.

"Aw, I'm only funning a little. You know that, Jerry. I'm not seriously trying to stick my neck in. But as to Rogers' men—you are partly right there. I do think maybe he ought to have stuck on his job."

"They went to the east range again yesterday morning. Why didn't he go with them instead of carting Lorena off to town?"

"Well, son, she had to have an escort, and his note said he had business in town. We wouldn't want her to go on that road again alone, after what happened to her the first time. I can't figure what those Mexicans were doing over in that part of the country unless they were just spies and thought they could kidnap Lorena for ransom money, but—"

"Well, tell, did Rogers have to be the escort? Couldn't—couldn't any of us have taken her in to the dentist, if she had to go? Rogers had business here, damn it!"

"Um, Son, there's no business as urgent as making love."

"Nuts!"

"No, no. When a man is taken to a girl, why, he will let everything else slip. Duty is strong, but woman lure is stronger, ain't it, Sally gal? Why, I didn't give a hang what else went on in the world when I was a-courting. All I wanted was to marry Sally Hamilton, and I done so!"

"George! I declare! Do you have to rant about it?"

"I wasn't ranting, Sally. I mean it. I mean I won you fair. I needed you, too. You was hard to get. But worth it."

"Well, my goodness, George Brazee! How you can run on! I'm going in the house."

Her husband laughed heartily as she went away.

His laughter, and the conversation that had preceded it, attracted some of the men who had been assigned to ride with Shot Rogers and who had been loafing around the ranch home all day. Four of them walked from the bunkhouse over to the blacksmith shop.

"Mr. Brazee," one of them spoke. "It don't look like Shot's liable to show up again today, ever."

"No. Nope, it don't. We were just talking about that. Unh-huh."

"Well, sir, you think maybe it would be all right—you think—uh, where at do you reckon Shot is? I mean, is he all right? We, uh—"

"Oh, shore!" Mr. Brazee grinned again. "It's just love, is all."

"Yes, sir, reckon so. You right sure he went in to town, no doubt? Reckon he had to squire Miss Lorena in?"

"Oh, yes."

"He ought to be here tending to his business affairs," Jerry Dale declared. "What about me taking charge of the scouts, Mr. Brazee, and seeing what can be done about Escobar? If Rogers is so interested in chasing off to—"

"You mean you want me to put you in charge, in his place?"

"Well, yes, sir, it's an idea. Isn't it? I'm it, now? There's a job to be done."

"We'd better wait for Shot," said the third man, dryly, and his three companions nodded. George Brazee did not miss the connotation of this.

"Shot'll be back in good time," George said. "He—he may be making out a new plan of his own. He'll check in."

"That's what we been a-saying. Mr. Brazee," the scout declared, nodding. "We can wait. But, uh, one point that is disturbin'."

"What's that?"

"Well, sir, what hosses did him and Miss Lorena ride in to town on? Or what hack? Or what car? How'd they go to town?"

He spoke seriously. George Brazee turned to look intently at the man.

"Why—why, you mean—?"

"Yes, sir. We been sort of checking in. Shot's horses are here. Every one's here, or whereabouts. Every hack and car's here. Shot'n Miss Lorena didn't ffiger to walk to Blanco, did they?"

Cheer and Help Are Needed by Brooding Youth

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous
Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Given health, a roof, enough to eat, and youth should be its own self-starter on the highway to happiness.

It takes so little to make girls and boys happy, surely extra effort, taking thought on the part of parents, is worth while. I'll admit it's a nuisance to help the youngsters give a party, or even to send them to one sometimes, but youth has certain rights and privileges that we elders are prone to overlook.

I can never read of the suicide of an adolescent in the papers without a dreadful heart sinking. Where have we failed—we older people—in not being able to put across to youth that today's tragedy is apt to be tomorrow's comedy? Nothing is so dreadful as it seems when the pressure is on.

Dr. Merrill Moore, who has delved exhaustively into human impulses and who is not only an instructor at Harvard but a psychiatrist and a poet as well, has shown how people are turned from suicide by a word spoken at the right time. People, especially young people, are so often like rudderless boats awash in the tide. They need rescuing; someone who understands, someone who like themselves has felt that any way out is better than the intolerable present, can save them.

Better Than Idleness
The life line may be nothing more than the suggestion to do something cheering instead of brooding. Employment, even unprofitable employment, is better than idleness. Hearts break, but time is healing. And the young pick up the pieces and go on.

In the many years I have written this column I have received thousands of letters from unhappy girls and boys—young people who saw no silver linings to their clouds. And when they open their hearts to me and tell me why they are so miserable, their unhappiness seems to me of a kind that could almost always be easily remedied.

Youth cries to youth. To be normal it must have the companionship of its kind. And here is where the strict parent, especially the strict father, fails. He would protect his daughter from every temptation and pitfall by shutting her up. He does not realize that a girl shut away from life does not know how to protect herself. That every puffy-faced boy seems an Apollo because she knows no boys. That being spoken to on the street is a divine adventure, because no boys speak to her in her own home, where she should be free to meet them.

May Be Unconscious
It is difficult to speak of the motive—maybe they are unconscious—of jilted parents who object to a girl having any life of her own even when her wages help to maintain the family. That they may reform is the earnest wish of everyone who knows of these conditions.

And there is the tragedy of the girl who lives in terror of anyone dropping in, for fear they may find her father or brothers, drunk. "I would rather die than have them see conditions in my home" is an all too familiar phrase in their letters.

Churches help to a great extent, by having rooms where young people can meet, prepare a meal, dance or play games. And can't our bridge-playing women do something? Cut out a couple of games a week and come to the rescue of these youngsters who have so little pleasure in their lives.

Farmer Planned For His Demise

Burnsville, W. Va., Sept. 12 (AP)—A premonition of death apparently came to John Franklin Fox, 82-year-old farmer.

The coffin in which the farmer was buried was ordered three years ago in order, he said, to save his wife needless worry after his death. He had made all other arrangements for his burial.

Phantom Ranch by OREN ARNOLD

CHAPTER FORTY
EVEN THOUGH the trail was winding and rough in places, a man could easily drive a truck from the Brazee home to Blanco, Arizona, 12 miles, in 30 or 40 minutes. Jerry Dale made the trip this afternoon in less than 25.

The truck he drove was not the light pickup. It was the larger one with high-barred side and end frame work, used to haul his prize bull. At times he had to bring expensive stock from Tucson, or even from Phoenix. At other times he had to take them in to the university for weighing and inspection, or had to shift cows to another ranch for testing on specified range conditions there. Jerry's work was an interesting and truly significant one, as George Brazee had known.

This afternoon, though, Jerry was not concerned with cattle at all. He rolled into Blanco at almost alarming speed, locked the wheels in front of Earlywine's general store there, and jumped down from the cab.

"Listen, Earlywine, has Rogers been in here? Shot Rogers?"

"Why, no, Nawp, ain't seen him, Mr. Dale."

"Hain't, eh? How about yesterday? Yesterday morning, you see him then? Anywhere in town?"

"Nawp, not none."

"And, uh, this Miss Lorena Hamilton, staying out at our place. Mrs. Brazee's niece. She been in? You heard about her, maybe?"

"Shore have. But haven't seen hide nor hair of her, neither."

Jerry walked out. He visited the railroad station agent, the post-office, the lone hotel where presided a gossiping matron who saw, heard, knew or imagined practically everything. Even this latter personage declined any knowledge of Shot Rogers and Lorena Hamilton. But she sensed something.

"Have they took and got into trouble, Mr. Dale? Shot'n her, I mean?"

"I don't know where they are. I don't know anything about them," Jerry didn't like the woman.

"Well, you was askin'. I always say if there's smoke there's fire. Now I'll bet she's one to drive the men to madness. The way they've all been a-takin' about how she come out here from the east and had a set-to with them Mexicans of Escobedo's. Wasn't it Shot Rogers what loaned her his horse that day, and wasn't it you that he hit with his fist at the dance that everybody was a-talkin' about, and wasn't it—"

"For god's sake, woman!" Jerry walked off and left her gazing. The municipality—unincorporated—of Blanco boasted one gentleman who had out a sign with "Dr." in front of his name. He delivered babies. He doctored such occasional maladies as biliousness, broken legs, flux, rheumatism and other things that beset ranch people. He could make a sick horse or cow well sometimes. And he could ill or pull human teeth. Jerry went to his office and found the old man asleep. Awakened with some effort, he swore he had not seen Lorena Hamilton, but was it true that some men out at Brazee's Phantom ranch had got into a cutting scrape because of her, and why?

And there is the tragedy of the girl who lives in terror of anyone dropping in, for fear they may find her father or brothers, drunk. "I would rather die than have them see conditions in my home" is an all too familiar phrase in their letters.

"Has Rogers been in here? Shot Rogers?"

wasn't he called to doctor the wounds?

Jerry left him in added disgust and went back to the hotel. The proprietor began gabbling at once, but he spoke only enough to get by her, went inside and began struggling with her wall telephone. In remarkably short time he had the Douglas, Ariz., operator.

When he had placed four or five calls there, he instructed the operator in Tucson and in Bisbee to try all the main dental offices in an effort to get news of Lorena Hamilton, then he went back to Earlywine's general store.

"I got to wait for some phone calls," he told that genial proprietor. "While I'm waiting you might dish me up some things."

"Anything you want, young man. If I ain't got it, I can go in to Tucson and get it. Earlywine's strives to please."

"You going in anyhow? Pretty soon?"

"Yep. Tomorrow."

"All right. Here—I'll just write out a list. Give me what you have in stock now, and get me what you have to. I'll send or come in for it soon as I can. And Mr. Earlywine, I want the best quality money can buy."

"I'll get it, young man."

The telephone calls elicited nothing, so Jerry went back to his truck. He had the motor started, then he jumped out and ran back into the store.

"Give me four, five boxes of pistol cartridges, Mr. Earlywine. I'll take them now. Forty-fives."

"Here they are. I put yore other stuff in the truck. Some of it."

Jerry realized he had important news. He had been suspicious of events, with no very tangible reason, since early yesterday morning, when Rogers and Lorena had failed to appear. But when somebody discovered that no Brazee horses or vehicles were missing, Jerry had been first to act.

He had told the newly alarmed Brazees that he would hurry into town and see if they were there. George Brazee had been prone to believe somebody had changed to come out and get them. Maybe that was even planned, he had said. Sally didn't believe it. This good woman felt that doom was striking again, doom for somebody. She almost had to go to bed with a case of nerves.

Corbin To Meet Tony Geno Here Monday

Eight Bouts on Armory Card Are Already Lined Up

Greenspring Lightweight Tackles Scrappy Pittsburgh 132-Pounder

Gene Kelly To Bring Four W. Va. Boys To Do Battle Here

Bill Corbin, scrappy little 132 pound Greenspring, W. Va., boxer will oppose Tony Geno, of the McLean A. C. of Pittsburgh, in one of the feature bouts to be held here next Monday. Corbin has come a long way up the fistic ladder since his first appearance here about a year ago, and Monday night's fight looks as about the hardest fight yet, when he faces the veteran Tony Geno of Pittsburgh.

Corbin is one of the few boys around here who have shown any signs of being headed for bigger things in the boxing game. Bill has never in his career been known to go on the defense. He is always boring in and throwing punches, and at the same time using a good knowledge of boxing to escape with a minimum of punishment.

Monday night's fight with Geno who has compiled a rather attractive record while campaigning in Pittsburgh in the last four years, will probably determine whether or not Corbin moves up to the main or semi-final bouts, on future Shamrock Cards.

Eight bouts are already in the offering for fight fans who attend Monday's card.

N. Y. Yanks Buy Five Players from Newark And K. C. Ball Clubs

New York, Sept. 12 (AP)—The New York Yankees, with their fourth straight American League pennant in sight, made plans for the 1940 season today by purchasing five players from their Newark and Kansas City farms for spring delivery.

From Newark comes Louis (Buddy) Blair, 24-year-old infielder, and Mike Chartak, outfielder-first baseman, in trade for pitchers Jimmy Doherty, Nick Strincevich and cash. Blair and Chartak were out of action most of the season with leg injuries.

The world champions bought two right-handed pitchers, Thomas Reis and Ernie Bonham, and first baseman Johnny Sturm from Kansas City, sending pitcher Jack Haley and cash to the American Association club, Haley, with Newark last year, has pitched for Columbus this season.

Posts Win, Lacys Lose In '39 Softball Finals

The South End Booster Softball League wound up the regular season yesterday with Post's winning the final game on their schedule with a 4-1 win over the Liberty Dairy ten. The Pirates sewed up the first place position Monday when they won over the Dairyman and Lacy, runner-up, lost to Sams Candy Kitchen. Sam's also took yesterday's tilt with Lacys 4-0.

Pennant Races at a Glance

The Cincinnati Reds maintained their 3½-game lead in the National League today, defeating the Brooklyn Dodgers while the second place St. Louis Cardinals were winning from the Phillies.

'39 May See End Of Waner Brothers With Pittsburgh

Two Rookies, Van Robays and Elliot, May Open Pair

By WILLIAM RITT
Central Press Sports Writer

New York, Sept. 12.—The rumors that Hank Greenberg may wear the spangles of the New York Yankees next season grow in strength and number. . . . New York born, Hank would be a Yankee natural.

And with Babe Dahlgren, Lou Gehrig's successor, consistently hitting below .250—well, if the New Yorkers don't make Detroit a fine offer for him it will be a great surprise.

The tragic death of Perida at Saratoga recently is making horsemen wonder if the Spa wheel doesn't labor under a jinx. . . . In the last two race meetings at Saratoga three thoroughbreds have met their death on the historic track.

Pittsburgh fans wonder if the Waner brothers may not be missing from that Pirate outfield next summer. . . . Paul and Lloyd are getting along in years and there has been plenty of nice things heard about two Pirate farm hands.

—Maurice Van Robays and Bob Elliott, recently called up to the Buccos.

What's become of Lew Tendler, the old lightweight fighter, who tried so gallantly, but vainly, to take Benny Leonard's crown? . . . That answer is easy: Lew's a successful restaurant operator in Florida. . . . He's planning, according to reports, opening his fourth eatery soon.

When a big league manager raves over a new player with a rival club that usually means something. . . . Pie Traynor, Pittsburgh's pilot, considers Cowley Padgett of the St. Louis Cardinals the fastest big man he has ever seen.

The Cleveland Rams must be going collegiate. . . . The pro grid outfit has lined up an 80-piece band to do its stuff before and between halves at all of the Rams home games.

Statistics show that currently there are but 387 major league baseball players. . . . An American boy's chance of making the big time are obviously pretty slim when you consider there are 30,000,000 or so young males in this country.

Byron Nelson, national open champion, thinks the best current big time golfer at driving is Jimmy Thomson. . . . The best putter, thinks Nelson, is Horton Smith.

Ninety racing outboards participated in the William Randolph Hearst international regatta which was run at Fountain lake at the New York's world's fair last Sunday. . . . Johnny Ritter of Paterson, N. J., the well-known midge-out racer will go aquatic for the event and has a boat entered.

The Los Angeles Pacific Coast league club is rapidly catching up with their rivals, the San Francisco Seals, as good baseball talent salesmen. . . . The Angels are said to have netted $45,500 in the sale of pitcher Julio Bonetti and catcher Bob Collins to the Chicago Cubs.

George Burns, one-time Cleveland Indian first base star, may operate the Yakima, Wash., Western International league club next season. . . . However, report has Burns denying this.

The Boston Red Sox probably never will catch and pass the New York Yankees this season, but they will have the opportunity to administer plenty more drubbings to the mighty Men of McCarthy before the season closes. . . . The two teams meet 10 more times and Boston has won eight out of the 12 already played.

Berkeley Springs Grid Team Reports

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Sept. 12.—The Berkeley Springs High football team will open its current season Saturday, September 30, by meeting the strong Handley High eleven at Winchester, Virginia.

Coach Paul Hodges has called his first practice session for this afternoon at which time equipment will be issued to the squad. Training is expected to get underway in earnest later in the week when enrollment at the school is completed.

At the present time only six games have been definitely arranged and Romney is the only new opponent on the local schedule. There are two open dates with which it is thought that games with Hedgesville and Shepherdstown may be carded.

Expecting a squad of approximately 30 boys, although lacking experienced players, having only four regulars back, Coach Hodges hopes to develop a formidable eleven to throw against all opponents.

Regulars expected to report again this year for football are Waugh, Michael, Henry Harrison and Wade. John Phillips, placed several years ago on one of the all-state elevens, will be eligible to play this year Phillips out of school year before last was not eligible to play in 1938.

September 30, Handley High at Winchester; October 6, open; October 13, at St. Mary's at Hagerstown; October 20, open; October 27, Charles Town at Charles Town; November 3, Ridgely at Berkeley Springs; November 10, Harpers Ferry at Berkeley Springs; and November 17, Romney at Romney.

Conn Favored To Whip Bettina in Return Tussle

Pittsburgh Buzzing With Enthusiasm Over Title Match Sept. 25

By ED KIELY
Central Press Sports Writer

Pittsburgh, Sept. 12.—An epidemic of fight fever, a disease that hasn't caught Pittsburgh's lethargic "slag row" addicts since the demise of the famous Harry Greb, has wrapped its tentacles around this "teeming metropolis" once again.

For on the 25th of this month, five days after the Joe Louis-Bob Pastor heavyweight title match in Detroit, the city's pride, a handsome Irish gent named Billy Conn, will defend his recently won light heavyweight title in his home town.

His opposition will be the rugged Mello Bettina, the broad-beamed Beacon (N. Y.) bopper, the fellow from whom Conn lifted the toga.

Billy's a Natural. Both men, from their respective posts on the outskirts of the city, ballyhoo their Herculean strength and how they are going to polish off one another.

From Conn's camp, a toney layout called "White Mansions" came the communique that the Hibernian, who has just moved with his parents up to Pittsburgh's ritzy Fifth avenue, has developed a "knockout punch," a potion of which he intends to slip to the unorthodox upstate New Yorker.

Billy the Kid, who sent boxing experts scurrying to the records to find a better exponent of boxing skill in the past decade, is a "natural" draw. The lank six-footer, with dark wavy hair and a matinee idol profile even entices squeamish females through the turnstiles to the ringside of his fights. Immobile to these facts, sweet "Willum" said: "All this talk about my boxing ability I guess is okay, but I want to be a hitter."

"Recently I've been spending a lot of time trying to develop a punch that will 'mow 'em down. I think I'm succeeding."

"Follows like Jack Dempsey," Conn continued, "drew million dollar gates. And why? Because they were strong as oaks and could clout Fans like that."

"You might add," Billy said, flicking his famous left under our nose, "that I could use a couple of those big gates, too."

Johnny Ray, an ex-fighter who nurtured Conn from boyhood, teaching him all the tricks of the manly art, is positive his boy will repeat the victory over Bettina. Ray is the champ's manager. Both the fighter and the manager have such devotion and faith in one another that their contract is merely verbal.

Over at Eagles' Rest Bettina's gym prior to the imbroglio, there is a determined atmosphere which exudes from all, especially Mello (pronounced May-lee-o, the accent on the second syllable, as Webster would say).

Bettina, a self-styled "tough hombre" is the antithesis of his opponent. He has a moon face, with gnarled features. His hair is fine and flat. He is squat and chunky, and his chest is very hairy, making him look much like a playmate of Tarzan.

A southpaw, this unconventional lad is the first "lefty" since Lew Tendler, who is able to hit with his right hand. Asked what he liked to do besides fight, Bettina replied:

"I like to dance. I'm a fancy rug cutter. You know, a jitterbug."

His boss, Jimmy Grippa, a fight manager by vocation and a hypnotist by avocation, feels that the decision his fighter lost to Conn in Madison Square Garden last May was unjust and he and his boy are out to redeem themselves.

He, with the purported "evil eye," felt sure the bacon would be returned to Beacon.

Meanwhile, "Uncle" Mike Jacobs, czar of the prize ring from U. S. A. to Ball Isles, Germany excluded, gleefully claps his hands and predicts a $140,000 gate, a record breaker indeed for a "Smokey City" fight.

Some of the sophomore talent is so promising that several veterans may be hard pushed to hold their jobs.

West Liberty State Teachers Looks to Tough Gridiron Fate

West Liberty, W. Va., Sept. 12 (AP)—Loss of six lettermen and a difficult schedule are twin factors which are bringing a grim look to the face of coach Joe Bartell of the West Liberty State Teachers College football team.

"The schedule is by far the hardest the school ever has attempted with almost certain losses to Morehead and Akron and with the Lock Haven, Salem, Glenville and Potomac games toss-ups," says Bartell.

Among the 15 lettermen returning are Wilbur Scott and Forrest Mellett, both of whom were big factors in West Liberty's four victories last year. Howard Bechtold, end, and Herbert Iannone, quarterback, both co-captains and five other backfield men, all lettermen, are among the veterans Bartell counts on most heavily.

Lost by graduation were Fowler, end; Murphy, tackle; Dipasquale, guard; Kelchak, center and Miller and Kuznicki, both backs. All were three-year lettermen; Kuznicki and Dipasquale were named for the all-conference.

Strongest at Tackles. The team is expected to be strongest at the tackles and at the halfback positions. Walter Willson, six feet tall and 183 pounds, probably will be the backfield mainstay. He is a good punter and passer.

"The prospects for a successful season are not so hot," says Bartell, "unless some of the new men can fill up the several big holes which are left by the loss of the six lettermen."

Among the prospective lettermen are Ray Huett, Weirton, tackle; Harry Gill, Flushing, Ohio, center; Jack Reeve, Wheeling, tackle; William Rohrig, Warwood, guard; James Demarck, Wheeling, end; Louis Nagy, Follansbee, back; Matthew Caldwell, Chester, back; Abe Lidy, Steubenville, Ohio, tackle; John Hellock, Moundsville, guard; and Sesto Vintorini, Tarentum, Pa., end.

Chicago White Sox Defeat Senators 3-2 on Double Error

Case Drops Liner Then Overthrows First; Kreevich Scoring

Washington, Sept. 12 (AP)—The Chicago White Sox scored twice in the eighth inning today on two singles and a double error by George Case for a 3 to 2 victory over Washington.

The Sox were trailing when pitcher Thornton Lee singled in the eighth, went to second on a sacrifice and scored on Mike Kreevich's single. Rip Radcliff then hit a liner to Case in right field. Case dropped the ball and then threw it wild to first, permitting Kreevich to reach home.

Washington finished the game under protest over a double play in the sixth inning.

Former Captain of Notre Dame Eleven Tops Pack

Tom Sheehan with 139 Is Medalist Setting New Record

Maurice McCarthy Second and Pat Abbott Places Third

By EARLE HILLIGAN
Chicago, Sept. 12 (AP)—Faith and vigor, "twas a great day for the Irish!"

Three sons of old Erin—Tom Sheehan, Maurice McCarthy and Pat Abbott—made the national amateur golf championship's end-of-qualifying program their own party today.

Sheehan, a husky 22-year old youth who is learning the gear mechanics business in Detroit, came out of the scrap on top with a great 36-hole total of 139 for medalist honors. His aggregate clipped two shots off the all-time 36-hole qualifying record for the 43-year old championship, which tomorrow will send 64 players into match play.

McCarthy, a copper pipe salesman from Cincinnati and long-time amateur star, was the kingpin most of the day with a 142 total before Sheehan took command. Shortly after Sheehan had come grinning off North Shore's 18th green, Abbott posted his 143 total, which gave him third place in the qualifying.

Captained Irish Eleven
Sheehan, a blond husky who captured Notre Dame's golf team two years ago, went in 34, two under par and came back in 35, one under par.

His three under par 69, added to first round 70, lowered by two strokes the old qualifying mark made by Johnny Fischer of Cincinnati in the 1933 championship. McCarthy, with a 70 yesterday, went out in 38 and came home in 71 today, giving a great display of his play.

Abbott, a movie extra who was finalist last year against champion Willie Turnesa, had a card of 87-72 today, even par, to add to his first round 71.

Turnesa, with a 74 today for a 146 aggregate, was well within the qualifying field but there were more than a score of players under 140.

Barry Haverstick of Lancaster, Pa., who had a pace-setting 68 yesterday, fell off to a 76 and was in 144 bracket with Ross (Sandy) Merrill, former champion, who shot 73 today.

Another ex-champion, Johnny Adman, who won the national title in 1933, was at 145, a stroke ahead of Marvin (Bud) Ward and Dick Chapman, the latter a semi-finalist at Oakmont.

Among the many who failed to qualify was Gus Moreland of Peoria, Ill., the 1938 medalist. Moreland shot a 78 today for a 158 total.

The North End Merchants, champion ten of the East Side Golf League, will meet the Westvaco A. A. team this evening at 7:30 on the North End Playground return game. The Westvacos will make a 7-4 decision to the Merchants last week. Promhart will pitch for the visitors while Chisholm will send Allan Quin to the slab for the North End.

St. Louis Merchants
The Froburg Merchants of the Bi-State League were eliminated from the NARF baseball tournament at Washington yesterday by the Dearborn Merchants, 13-9.

It was the second defeat for the Merchants who had lost their first start of the series to Detroit entry and won their first two from the Chicago and Atlanta teams. The Detroit team was the championship entrant was a highly rated favorite to take this year's crown.

THE BOB JONES ANGLE

North Shore C. C., Chicago, Sept. 12.—The sixty-four survivors from medal play had been posted as Bob Jones looked over the list.

"How would you like to be one of those?" I asked. "It's been nine years since you had your crack at an amateur field."

"I wouldn't like it at all," he said, "not with those four 18-hole rounds ahead. I can still feel the night-mares they used to bring me. They still come back to haunt me—like old ghosts. You figure almost every putt may be the one that will beat you. I was lucky. I happened to hole my share. But I still remember the day ten years ago when Johnny Goodman holed more than I did—and I was out of the tournament at Pebble Beach almost before it had started."

"Johnny was 3 up before I knew what had hit me. I caught him later but he had too much left in the stretch."

Johnny is still on hand. He proved the Jones match was no one-day fluke by winning both amateur and open titles later on.

The Jones Pick
"Who do you like in this field?" I asked Bob, who made his first big splash at Merion in 1916 at the tender age of 14. That was 23 years ago.

"I just told you," he said. "I don't like anybody much in an 18-hole match. Too many things can happen in a hurry. In my opinion, Bud Ward is one of the best amateurs we've had in a long time. Anyone who can shoot 285 in an open championship has to be a great golfer. Ward has both length and control, and he knows how to concentrate."

I liked Willie Turnesa's swing when I first saw him at Brookline some years ago. Willie is sound all the way through. Johnny Fischer is another high-class player. Both Ward and Fischer have the edge over Turnesa and most of the others in the matter of length. Johnny Fischer will have to improve the putting I saw him use at Portland in 1937 and at Oakmont in 1938.

Putting Values
"These putting greens are a small part of the 145 acres on a golf course," Bob continued, "but they win or lose most of the matches. Especially at 18 holes."

"Look how close Fischer was to the title last year. All he had to do was hole a twelve-inch putt on the 15th green. At the 17th where he drove that tough Oakmont plateau, Fischer only had to get down in two putts from twenty-five feet away while Turnesa had to get down in one putt from twelve-feet away. Turnesa holed his twelve-footer and Johnny blew a three-footer. And that's still golf. At those two points the odds were 30 to 1 on Fischer—maybe 50 to 1. But still he lost."

"What about the best putters here—the ones you've seen?" I asked the Georgian.

"Goodman is still a fine putter," Bob said. "So is Dick Chapman. Bill Holt is another."

"What about Charlie Yates, your Atlanta successor?" I asked.

"Charlie is always a hard opponent to beat," Jones told me. "He is not only a fine all-around golfer but he has a marvelous temperament. Nothing upsets him. Around the greens he can have his big days and he can also have his off days. If he is putting up to normal he can go quite a way—far enough to win the breaks."

Hard Life
"This tournament golf is no easy life," Bob Jones continued. "You know I've always said that friendly golf and tournament golf were two different games. They are. You can relax in friendly golf. The tension is terrific in championship play. More than most people can understand."

As Tommy Armour has said, "It's far softer to be hit on the chin by a Joe Louis than it is to have the nerves suffer six hours a day. A knockout only lasts ten seconds."

"I played tournament golf for sixteen years. I took all the beating of nerves I wanted in that time—and I'm not including the Masters' at Augusta National. I've taken plenty there, but that was to be expected."

"Look over the field. It is full of fine amateurs. There are sixty-four left from over 800 starters of a few weeks back. By tonight there will be only sixteen left. Forty-eight of these will pass out of the picture some time today and this list will include some of the headliners. Among those who started on Monday you could have said that Ward, Fischer, Turnesa, Goodman, Doering, Yates, Chapman, Abbott, Holt, Moreland—to mention only a few—were all good enough to win with the breaks."

"But who knows which ones will be gone by tonight? You may remember that George Von Elm couldn't survive the first round for four consecutive years—and Von Elm was one of the best golfers we've had around, amateur or pro."

"What makes championship golf so much harder?" I asked.

"Tension," Bob answered. "Nerve tension. The tendency to steer instead of taking a full turn and swinging naturally—jitters around the green—distractions from the gallery and crowd—the job of trying to concentrate on every shot, which you must do. But most of all tension—especially in these 18-hole rounds where anything can happen in a hurry."

Chicago Cubs Hit Timely To Whip Boston Bees, 8-3

Leiber and Russell Smack Homers and Herman Steals Home

Chicago, Sept. 12 (AP)—Hank Leiber and Rip Russell hit homers, Leiber with the bases loaded, and Billy Herman stole home today to help Bill Lee score his 17th triumph as the Chicago Cubs trounced the Boston Bees, 8 to 3.

Leiber's four run homer came in the opening inning off Bill Posedel with none out after Stan Hack and Herman had singled and Augie Galan had walked. The Cubs then clouted 12 more hits off Posedel's successors Johnny Lanning, George Barnick and Tom Earley.

Herman's theft of home came in the sixth inning when he and Galan worked a double steal on Barnick's prolonged windup.

Hitler Betrayed German People, Rotarians Told

Owen Smith Speaker at Meeting of Frostburg Group

Frostburg, Sept. 12.—Owen Smith, Cumberland, who, with a companion from Detroit, spent part of the past summer on a 2000 mile bicycle tour of England and Germany, was the guest speaker Monday evening before the Frostburg Rotary Club.

He devoted most of his time to a discussion of Germany and the cordial reception he and his companion received in Berlin, Hanover, Nuremberg and other cities by Germans whom they contacted while on the trip.

Mr. Smith, who returned to the United States eleven days before the outbreak of war, stated that he found a widespread belief among Germans, old and young, that war would not be resorted to by the Nazi leaders to settle the country's disputes with other nations. In England, he said, the people seemed to expect war and were resigned to it.

In declaring war, Hitler, in the opinion of Mr. Smith, had betrayed the confidence and faith of the German people.

The address was replete with information concerning political events in Germany since the end of the World War and the attitude of the people towards their neighbors in Europe.

All Germans, the speaker said, wanted the territory they lost in the last war, including their colonies, and the promise of the Nazi leaders to accomplish this by peaceful means was responsible, he was informed, for the rise of the National Socialist party under the leadership of Hitler.

Guests at the luncheon included: Harold W. Smith, secretary of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, and William Smith, father and brother of the speaker; Robert Crawford, Akron, Ohio; John Tenney, Hagerstown; William Lewis, secretary of the Cumberland Y.M.C.A.; Charles Cook and George Paxton, Meyersdale, and Thomas Elias, Jr., this city.

New Airport Project Brought Back to Life Again

City Officials Ready To Finish Survey of Site

Study Half Done Because City Balked Last Spring

Completion of the once-shelved Wiley Ford airport survey was virtually assured today following a joint session of the mayor and City Council and three members of the Airport Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

Although the mayor and city council definitely indicated that they intended to feel their way along on this airport proposition, they did give their O. K. for the completion of the survey.

The survey, started several months ago under the direction of City Engineer Ralph L. Riser, was abruptly halted before it was finished.

Don't Want to Spend

Following yesterday's meeting, Mayor Irvine stated that the job would be completed provided Engineer Riser submitted an itemized account of the probable cost and providing it would not be necessary to appropriate any more money for the job.

Council members said the work could be completed at no additional outlay other than the use of funds already allocated to such work in the engineer's department.

Representatives of the Chamber of Commerce who attended the meeting were Arthur Weber, Oscar Gurley, James Shriver and Chamber Secretary H. W. Smith.

Commenting on the survey, Smith stated that it would definitely show whether the construction of an airport would be a practical WPA job.

Completion Only "Horse Sense"

Smith also stated that concluding a survey that had already been started was just plain horse sense.

The chamber secretary also stated that it would be a good idea to have facts and figures ready when the government really becomes interested in an airport in Cumberland and decides to boost its ante.

"In a case like that we wouldn't want to get lost in the shuffle," Smith declared.

"This survey should show whether the construction of an airport here would be a sound economical WPA project, and I think it would be," Smith concluded.

Two Couples Hurt When Car Upsets

Youths Only Bruised Despite Overturning

Four young persons were slightly injured yesterday afternoon when their car overturned on the Bedford road.

The accident occurred about 4:30 p. m. when the machine driven by Paul Dystart, 22, of Huntingdon, Pa., skidded on the wet road near Wilhelm's service station.

Other occupants of Dystart's car were Maxine Hall, 17, William Horton, 21, and Arlene Gessinger, 18, all of Huntingdon. They were treated at Allegheny hospital for bruises.

Dystart's machine was traveling towards Cumberland when the accident took place.

W. Lee Elgin Proposes Hitching Gas Buggies to a Star for Safety

Hitching modern wagons to a star might go along way toward promoting safety on the highways, according to W. Lee Elgin, of Hagerstown, State commissioner of motor vehicles.

Commissioner Elgin put this idea across last night at the monthly dinner-meeting of the Cumberland Junior Chamber of Commerce at Central YMCA.

Issue Stars With Tags

He said it had occurred to him that it might be a good idea to issue gummed stars with each set of license plates, with some suitable legend on them. These might be attached to automobiles at the same time the tags are put on, he added.

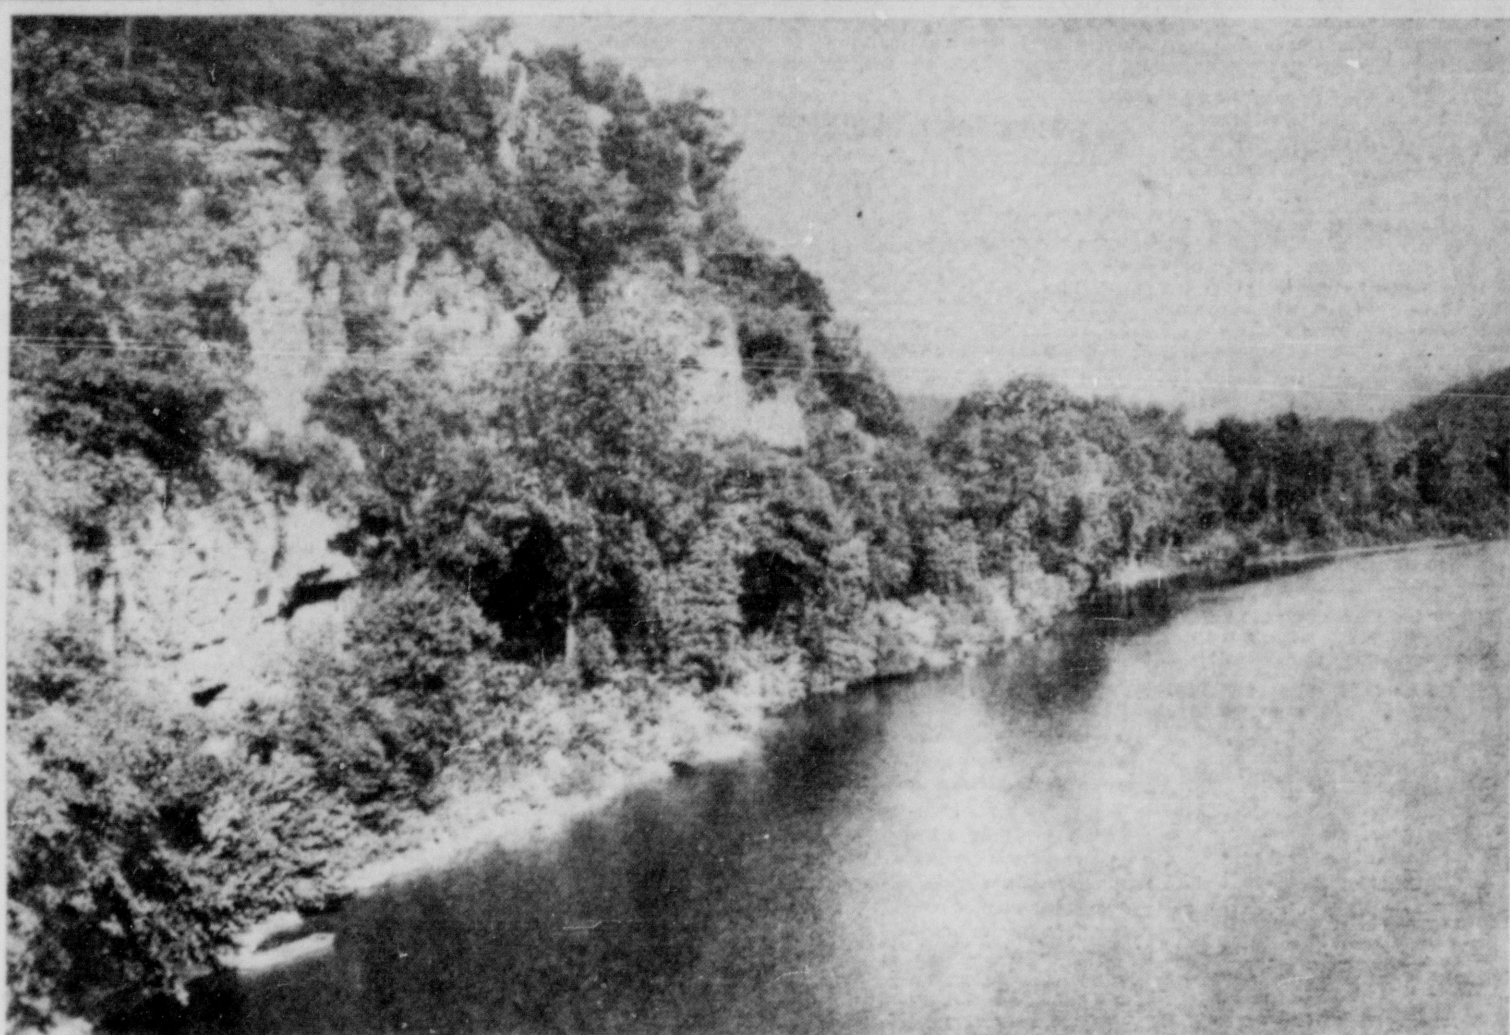

When, however, a motorist was convicted of violating traffic laws, he would have to surrender his safety star.

Education of the public to the significance of the presence—or absence—of these stars on a windshield would probably aid in traffic safety work, he declared. He also advocated awards to "safe drivers."

The motor vehicle department head made a simple, but sincere and moving, plea for cooperation in cutting the traffic toll in Maryland.

Urges 'Traffic School'

He suggested, among other things, that the association and similar organizations sponsor "traffic schools" to instruct youngsters how to drive a car safely. Mr. Elgin proposed that youths attend such a school before applying for driving licenses. The speaker hit especially at the menace of drunk driving and prom-

Negro Students Still on Strike

Classrooms in Church Being Prepared

Special to The News

Piedmont, W. Va., Sept. 12 — Teachers and school buses will appear as usual at the Howard high school for negroes from Piedmont and Keyser tomorrow morning, but there were no indications tonight that the 180 striking pupils would appear.

The colored pupils paraded with placards yesterday when other Mineral county schools opened, and refused to enter their old school building, saying it was unsuitable for use.

The striking students did not appear for class again today, although transportation was provided and the teachers were present.

Meanwhile, school officials began improvements on the Church of God in Christ building on Water street, which will be used as a school for the colored pupils until a new school can be built by the WPA.

Assurances by school officials that plans for the new school were going ahead as rapidly as possible failed to prevent the strike.

It is expected that the striking students will return to class when the church rooms are ready for use sometime next week, if they do not return sooner.

Midland Republicans To Meet Friday

The newly-organized Republican club of Midland and vicinity will meet Friday night at Red Men's hall, Midland, it was announced yesterday.

The club covers Election Districts No. 18, 19, and 27.

Chamber Committee Hits Real Estate Tax Rate

Staggering real estate taxes that have made scores of Allegany county citizens "property poor" may get a general overhauling if a proposed program of the Chamber of Commerce works out successfully. After noting that the bulk of tax money comes from real estate and that the condition is seriously affecting real estate values, the Civic Improvement Committee of the Chamber yesterday decided to act.

Recommend Study

The committee, headed by Frank Smith, recommended that the Chamber study the methods of appraising and taxing real estate and then do something about it.

In its recommendation to the Chamber board, the committee stated that any such research should be conducted with the idea of establishing a better method of raising tax money.

At the same time, the members emphatically declared that the move should not be construed as a criticism of any public official.

Sales Tax Hinted

However, members agreed that the taxation burden on real estate might possibly be reduced by a new distribution of taxes.

It was pointed out at the meeting that a number of states have tackled this problem with a sales tax, but the committee made no move yesterday toward openly sponsoring a sales tax campaign.

It was pointed out that a recent tax statement prepared by the Detroit Bureau of Governmental Research shows that an average family with a $2,500 a year income, in a Maryland home appraised at $5,441, pays in direct taxation a total of $195.84.

Say Taxes Keep Rents Up

Although many Cumberland area residents in the lower income brackets have kicked about high rents, Harold W. Smith, Chamber secretary, pointed out yesterday that there isn't a property owner in Cumberland who is now netting more than from two to five per cent on the present scale of rents.

One Cumberland property owner reported a two-and-a-half per cent profit after taxes had been paid and depreciation determined. This net profit, he added, was assuming that his property was rented twelve months out of the year.

List Possible Projects

Two other improvements recommended yesterday by the civic committee were:

1. The possibility of eliminat-

Police Make Arrest In Attempted Attack On Young Girl

Police yesterday cleaned up a two-month-old case when a 21-year-old Cumberland youth admitted attempting to rape an 11-year-old girl last July.

Earl L. Stewart, 21, was nabbed Monday night by Officers W. B. Loveston and Thomas Griffin. He was questioned yesterday by State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris, County Investigator Terrence J. Boyle, and Detective Sgt. Frank Gaffney.

The officers stated that Stewart readily admitted the attempted attack. He will be given a hearing this morning in Trial Magistrate Court. Officers stated the difficulty in arresting the guilty man in the case was due to the meagre description furnished by the victim.

Passes Bar Exam

David Kauffman, son of Mrs. Lena Kauffman, of LaVale, was one of 398 to pass the summer examinations for admittance to the District of Columbia bar.

Kauffman is a graduate of Allegheny high school, the University of Pennsylvania, and the Harvard Law School.

Crash Victims Will Survive

Both Drivers Under Arrest

Reckless driving counts were placed against two drivers yesterday as a result of an automobile accident late Monday night in which two persons were seriously injured.

Drivers of the cars involved were Richard Mikesell, 19, of 349 Greene street, and Carl B. Day, of Ridgeley.

The accident occurred when the high powered car driven by Mikesell crashed into the rear of the vehicle operated by Day, on the mountain just out of Ridgeley. Both machines were traveling towards Port Ashby.

Seriously injured in the crash were Melvin Sandusky, 22, of 311 North Mechanic street, and William Smith, 23, of 548 Greene street. Sandusky suffered a broken back and shock. Smith suffered a brain concussion and a fractured left shoulder.

Sandusky's and Smith's conditions were reported "serious" yesterday at the hospital. But they are expected to "pull through," attaches at Allegheny hospital said.

Two other young men, John Straw, 28, of 444 Walnut street, and Gerald Dash, 23, of 811 Columbia avenue, along with Mikesell, were less seriously injured.

Court hearings for Mikesell and Day have been postponed pending the outcome of the injured men's injuries.

Walsh Will Speak In New York

Attorney General William C. Walsh, of Cumberland, will deliver the principal address at the Golden Jubilee banquet of the Alumni Association of the Catholic University of America it was announced yesterday.

The banquet will be held at the Pennsylvania hotel in New York, Sunday, Sept. 24. The banquet will mark the closing of a year of special ceremonies in honor of the founding of the Catholic University in Washington by Pope Leo XIII in 1863.

Attorney General Walsh received his law degree from the university in 1913.

Rt. Rev. Quinn Reported Better

Rt. Rev. Monsignor James Quinn, V. F. pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church and dean of the Western Maryland Section of the Archdiocese of Baltimore, was reported "improved" yesterday at Allegheny hospital.

Monsignor Quinn was admitted to the hospital Friday, after being under a physician's care for several days at the parish rectory on North Centre street.

Town Hall Players Giving 'Stage Door'

The Town Hall Players, Cumberland's troupe of amateur actors, will open their season with the stage and screen success "Stage Door," which they will present in mid-October.

Carl Low is director.

California Preacher At First Brethren

The Rev. C. E. Johnson, of California, is "preaching the Gospel with power" at the First Brethren church at the corner of Fourth and Seymour streets each evening at 7:30, the pastor, the Rev. C. H. Wakeman, announced.

Mr. Johnson's subject for tonight will be the "Second Coming of Christ." Signs of an early coming will be enumerated.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

Frank Lee Carl returned to work yesterday after a cruise to Labrador, reporting that the British ship North Star, on which he sailed, was blacked out at night because of the war danger. That, he says, was enough of a "war thrill" to more than satisfy him.

Roy McCardell, native son who has made his mark in the world as a humorist and clever fellow, gave the old home town a break, and lots of local yokels a thrill, last night when he gave Cumberland as his address while being interviewed on a nationwide broadcast.

The occasion was that coffee company's hour, "We the People." Several of our listening friends were kind enough to call in and tell us about it.

Roy was interviewed on the air chiefly from the angle that he is a professional winner of prize contests. He has won over $50,000 in prize contests, our friend Charlie Welsh understood him to say.

He told the story that the first prize he won was a racoon, and that when he got home he found that he had won not only a mother racoon but also a family of baby racoons. That, he said, led him to believe that prize contests really paid dividends.

Roy McCardell has lived in New York for about thirty years, but his friends were glad to know he still considers our little burg as his home. Richard P. McCardell, of Cumberland, is a brother.

Being in the newspaper business, we have no desire to discourage people from reading their daily paper whenever they please.

But it is a known fact that husbands who read the news at meal time in preference to making a conversation with their wives are heading for trouble. Or else they have wives who are fat and comfortable and very wise and very tolerant.

Since this is a known fact, it will probably be a serious blow to the newspaper industry for us to go on and say that reading war news at the table is very harmful to the digestion.

The hungry looking little boys who peddle newspapers in restaurants will probably be sore at us for saying this, but we can't help it.

Polish names are very difficult to digest at any time of the day, but they are definitely poison if taken with a tough steak or restaurant hash.

You never know but what you will read right along into the name of a town like Przemysl just as you are swallowing a big forkful of mashed potatoes — or some hot soup.

Or some bit of propaganda will make you splutter and swear into your dessert in a way which is not only sinful, but most unhealthy.

If while your teeth are tearing into a plate-pleasing salad your brain is busy bombing a refugee train or sniping on the invaders, then the emotions of your poor stomach become so mixed that serious gastronomic complications are certain to result.

We think the neutrality act should be amended to make it a criminal act to sell or unfold newspapers in the presence of food or to tune in war news on the radio at meal times.

Such a law might be difficult to enforce, but unless something is done to keep our digestions neutral, the American people will soon be so dyspeptic that they will declare war against the whole world just out of general cussedness.

At least that's the way we feel right now after mixing up war communique with our supper. And it was a good supper, too.

We went fishing in the South Branch over the week-end. The fish must have been terribly bored. There were fishermen everywhere, wading, boating, crawling through the weeds, and asleep in the shade.

All of them (except those who were asleep) were whipping the water with all kinds of luscious and cleverly designed baits. There wasn't a spot in the river where a poor fish could spend a quiet Sunday afternoon without having food thrown at it.

The fish obviously were not hungry. Or else they were maintaining a strict neutrality.

There were so many fishermen out with all kinds of equipment, that we watched very carefully when an airplane came over the mountain. But we couldn't see for sure whether the pilot and his passengers took time out to drop in a line or two, or not.

The crew of a German submarine hove to in a riffle to catch themselves some fresh supplies, but a game warden came prowling along and the submarine hauled in its Nazi flag and disappeared in the direction of Greenspring.

No fooling, that's how crowded the river was. After milling around in the crowd for most of the day, catching nothing, we (Continued on Page Five)

Mayor Wants Dam Jobs For Cumberland Workers

'Automatic' Car Stalls, Is Smacked by Train

The driver of a new car with one of those new-fangled automatic gear shifts stalled his machine when he tried to back off the Baltimore street B. & O. crossing early yesterday.

The machine moved off the crossing fast enough when a shift engine struck it, carried it ten feet, and jammed it against a pole, damaging the front end.

The driver, Charles R. Mason, of Hyndman, escaped uninjured. Officer Robert V. Chisholm said Mason told him he stalled when he tried to back off the crossing after belatedly noticing the watchman's signal.

The accident occurred at 3:18 a. m.

Doesn't Like Idea Of All Jobs Going 'Up the Creek'

A vigorous protest to any plan that would deprive Cumberland workers the opportunity of securing jobs on the Savage River Dam project yesterday was registered by Mayor Harry Irvine.

The mayor's protest came with a bang when WPA representatives casually suggested that employment for the job might possibly come from "up the creek" while Cumberland took care of its own unemployed.

"When they let the cat out of the bag like that, you might say I blew up," Mayor Irvine commented last night.

City Pays Bulk of Taxes

"After Cumberland worked the way it did to bring that dam here and when you remember that Cumberland pays about sixty-five per cent of all the county taxes, it doesn't seem quite logical to suggest that our citizens be deprived of work on this dam," the mayor said.

The mayor's admitted "blowup" occurred yesterday when members of City Council conferred with Henry Tarring Jr., local WPA official, and F. W. Springer, area WPA boss from Frederick.

"We have been counting on that work for Cumberland people for a long time," Mayor Irvine told the two WPA officials.

Should Divide Work

The mayor stated that the work should undoubtedly be divided up in the county, but that Cumberland should be given jobs on the dam, and plenty of them.

Judging by the plan advanced yesterday by WPA officials, it had evidently been a forgone conclusion that Cumberland would get along without representation on the dam crew the mayor said.

WPA officials agreed to reconsider their plan when the mayor and council members laid their cards on the table, Mayor Irvine said.

Laid off Men to Return

Yesterday's conference also revealed that 150 of some 200 men who were laid off due to the eighteen-months ruling will be returned to work. Fifty more will be returned in another week, Tarring said.

Acquainted with this fact, the mayor and council started plans for putting the men back to work on street projects in the city.

Between 75 and 100 men will probably start work on street jobs Monday, it was believed.

According to present plans the men will probably start work paving Harrison, Cumberland, and Polk streets and part of George street.

France and England 'Ready,' Says Henderson

Col. George Henderson was the speaker at last night's meeting of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion.

Colonel Henderson, recently returned from Europe, discussed his observations while "over there."

Like most other returning Cumberlanders, he said the war came as a surprise. But France and England were "ready," he added.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Finan, 304 Cumberland street, announce the birth of a son last night at Memorial hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Mathews, 1405 East Oldtown road, announce the birth of a son last night at Memorial hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Clement Reckley, of Paw Paw, W. Va., announce the birth of a daughter yesterday morning at Allegheny hospital.

Cop Zawaski Makes Flying Tackle To Down Fugitive Knife Wielder

If the Cumberland police force ever organizes a football team, Officer Frank Zawaski is slated for the fullback's berth.

It was Zawaski who early this week brought down one of the speediest open field runners the Cumberland underworld has ever produced.

The man who was downed is De-Shong Willis, husky Frederick street negro, who today will be given a hearing in Trial Magistrate's Court for violating his parole and assaulting a man with intent to kill.

Willis' most recent caper occurred several weeks ago when he tied into another Cumberland negro with a fourteen-inch butcher knife which police alleged he knew how to use.

Police last night were unanimous in admitting that Willis is probably one of the toughest hombres local officers have ever bumped into.

Willis first came to the attention of police in 1935 when he was shot down by Sgt. John Kries, of the Maryland State Police, while resisting arrest. Kries trapped Willis in a Frederick street coal shed after the negro had shot a young Cumberland negro girl.

He was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. The sentence was suspended. On another occasion, Willis was charged with burglarizing John Williams' store at 336 Frederick street. He was placed on parole.

After the butcher-knife episode several weeks ago, police started a quiet hunt which ended when four officers surprised Willis while he was witnessing a ball game at Community Hall park.

Trapped at Ball Game

Informed that Willis was enjoying the game from a perch on the railroad tracks, Officers W. B. Loveston, Thomas Griffin, W. D. Crabtree and Frank Zawaski hurried out to the park.

Approaching the negro from two directions, the four officers suddenly cast a shadow over him before he knew what was going on.

But surprised or not, Willis lurched to his feet and started for safety with the speed of a dash man.

But the policemen were not to be denied. Bearing down on the speeding Willis, Officer Zawaski hurled his body like a fullback and nailed the fugitive with one of the neatest shoe-string tackles ever made by the local police force.
